Two Multi-Alarm Fires In One Week

Cause Of Blazes Still Under Investigation

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy firefighters battled two multi-alarm fires in less than one week, including a five-alarm fire in Wollaston and a three-alarm fire in West Quincy.

Firefighters were called to the blaze at 37-41 Copeland St. in West Quincy around 5:30 a.m. Sunday, Deputy Fire Chief Gary Smyth said the following day.

The house at 37-41 Copeland St. includes a two-family apartment building and an attached single-story brick building that was formerly a business before it was converted to an apartment.

Koch Won't Sign EPA Consent Decree

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch said he would not enter into a consent decree to undertake millions of dollars in repairs to Quincy's sewer and drain systems after the filing of a federal lawsuit alleging the city is in violation of the Clean Water Act.

The city, Koch said, has spent millions already to address those concerns and he was wary of tying up future funds for a decade or more.

Koch spoke during a City Hall press conference the afternoon of March 15, hours after Andrew Lelling, the U.S. attorney for the

Mayor Highlights Repairs To Sewer System

Mayor Thomas Koch on Monday highlighted improvements made in recent years to Quincy's sewer system, days after the federal government announced the filing of a civil suit against the city for alleged violations of the Clean Water Act.

Koch went before the City Council on Monday night to discuss the pending litigation, which was filed March 15. The civil complaint alleges the city violated the Clean Water Act by allowing sewage and untreated wastewater to enter into Boston Harbor and

Planning Board OKs McGrath Highway Building

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board gave its approval to a proposed 42-unit residential building on McGrath Highway in Quincy Center, which nearly a dozen residents opposed primarily over parking and traffic issues.

George Lang went before the Planning Board on March 13 with his proposal to construct the new building on three parcels of land:

70 Spear St., 53 Newcomb St. and 66 McGrath Hwy. The three parcels include 36,222 square feet of land and are all in a Business C zoning district.

PorchFest Quincy June 22 Set For Three Neighborhoods

By SCOTT JACKSON
The fourth annual PorchFest Quincy is set to take place Saturday, June 22, in the city's Merrymount, Squantum and Wollaston Hill neighborhoods. The event will take place from 3 to 9 p.m. that day, rain or shine, said Ward 3 City Councillor Ian Cain. Performances will take place from 3 to 7 p.m. in Merrymount and Wollaston Hill, and from 4 to 9 p.m. in Squantum. Last June's PorchFest had 130 performers at more than 80 locations throughout those same neighborhoods, Cain said, and he expects a similar showing this year. Musical acts looking to perform in this year's PorchFest and homeowners interested in hosting performances that day can sign up online at porchfestquincy.org.

"We'll obviously ask the same groups back and we're always looking for more talent to come join the ranks,"

Cain said.

The event is meant to bring local musicians and neighborhoods together to celebrate and grow a sense of community and allows performers to showcase their talents. A wide variety of musical acts – including genres such as blues, classical, country, jazz, Latino, R&B, reggae, rock and more – have performed in previous PorchFest events.

"It's been a wonderful sort of new holiday in Quincy and enjoyed by young and old folks alike," Cain said. "We don't get many complaints. We get great support from the Police and Fire Departments and the Parks Department as well."

"We're looking forward to another exciting event this year."

Cain went before the Board of License Commissioners on March 12 to obtain a special-use permit for the June 22 event, which was granted unanimously.

The board has also granted beer trucks one-day licenses allowing them to

QUINCY | WEYMOUTH | HINGHAM

What do I need to know about transferring or traveling with a person who has been cremated?

Honoring the memory of a loved one and the needs of the family is always the first consideration when determining what to do when a loved one dies. Cremation offers the flexibility to do that and the cremation experts at Keohane will work with you to ensure that you have the information you need to transport your loved one safely, with dignity, and in compliance with any laws or regulations that may exist.

Most families find it important to create a lasting memorial of some kind through earth burial or placement in a columbarium and may need to transfer the deceased to a cemetery or a family member in a distant location. Some families may wish to keep the person in their care for some time or to travel to a meaningful location for a scattering ceremony. Whatever the reason for travel, our funeral directors are there to help you make the appropriate plans.

PAPERWORK AND SAFETY:

Whether traveling by car locally or traveling by air internationally, it is vitally important that you carry proper identification and certificates. In addition, different modes of transportation will require different types of urns and packaging. Your cremation expert will help ensure that you have what you need.

FLYING:

When planning to transfer someone with you by air, it is always important to check with your particular carrier as policies differ from airline to airline. That said, the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) does have a standard, respectful screening process. If you are carrying your loved one onboard with you, it is important to know that this will involve the use of X-ray equipment. Since it is against TSA regulations to open an urn, the urn you select should be made of a lighter material, such as wood, so it will not impede the X-ray equipment. Our cremation experts offer a variety of effective options to ensure that you are able to transport your loved one in a dignified and efficient manner and comply with any particular airline restrictions or regulations.

US POSTAL SERVICE:

The United States Postal Service offers the only legal method of shipping someone who has been cremated and there are very specific requirements. For domestic addresses, one must use the Priority Mail Express service. Both an urn and outer container are required and they must be sift proof. For international addresses, the inner container must be a sealed urn. The USPS recommends that you discuss your needs with your funeral director to help you select the most appropriate urn.

CONFIDENCE AND SAFETY GUARANTEED

At Keohane, our funeral directors are cremation experts who are committed to helping you find the most effective solutions for your needs. We will help you meet all travel requirements to ensure that your loved one reaches the intended destination safely.

New Quincy Center Bridge Gets Go-Ahead

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board gave its blessing to a Quincy Center bridge that will connect Burgin Parkway to Cliveden Street.

The board granted a special permit for the bridge, which Mayor Thomas Koch has dubbed the Generals Bridge, during its meeting on March 13. The city's zoning ordinances were amended last year to require a special permit before any bridge could be built in the city; the change was made after Boston introduced plans to rebuild the Long Island Bridge.

Construction of the Generals Bridge is expected to take two years, according to Frank Tramontozzi, an engineer for the city, and will start this spring. The state paid for the design of the new bridge and will also pay for its construction and future upkeep. The bridge will cost about $10 million, Tramontozzi said.

The new bridge will have one 11-foot travel lane in each direction, plus a five-foot shoulder. There will be a sidewalk on each side of the bridge as well. Motorists will only be allowed to take a right-hand turn onto the bridge and a right-hand turn off it.

The bridge will provide access from Burgin Parkway to the Ross Lot area, where FoxRock Properties is proposing a development with a medical office building, a 140-room hotel and 110 residential units. The

EARTHLY FIRE

Lucky are those born in delightful April, for diamond is their birthstone. The Egyptians viewed the diamond as the symbol of life, using it as the centerpiece for their Ankh, a hieroglyphic shape representing life. How fitting that the diamond is April's stone, a month that brings the promise of life bursting from the earth, the trees, the streams, and nature itself. Ancient civilizations believed the diamond was light in physical form on earth and was imbued with tremendous healing powers. They spoke of rebirth and springing forth of good health and well-being. Diamonds first became popular in India as they were easily mined when rich deposits were found along three major rivers.

Certain occasions in life are significant milestones and deserve to be commemorated with gifts of exceptional beauty and importance. As the ultimate symbol of romance, diamonds say “I love you” with engagement rings and “I love you more than ever” with anniversary rings. Diamond, April's birthstone, celebrates special private moments, birthdays, and holidays. We'll put your words of love in a beautiful gift box from Rogers Jewelry. Stop by 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center soon, where our diamond collection contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. PH: 617-773-3636.

Cannons To Fund $1.5 Million In Renovations At Vets' Stadium

Digital Scoreboard, New Seating, Locker Rooms Among Upgrades

The Boston Cannons will undertake $1.5 million worth of renovations to Veterans' Memorial Stadium in Quincy, including a new state-of-the-art digital scoreboard, stadium-style seating and upgrades to the venue's press box and locker rooms.

The Boston Cannons, a Major League Lacrosse team, in December announced plans to move to Veterans' Memorial Stadium from Harvard Stadium starting in the 2019 season. The Cannons pledged to make significant investments into the stadium to benefit all those who use it at that time.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the improvements would benefit all users of the stadium, including the city's high schools and local youth leagues.

"This extraordinary investment into Veterans Memorial Stadium will benefit all of our young people who use the facility every day as well as the thousands of our residents who attend events there throughout the year," the mayor said in a statement.

Uniform Shower Rooms At City Fire Houses

In an effort to eliminate any contamination of carcinogens to the living quarters in Quincy Fire Stations and try to reduce cancer rates in the fire service, the City of Quincy has started building new "shower rooms."

These new rooms will be equipped with new bathrooms, showers, new industrial extractors for bunker gear and new washers and dryers for work uniforms. IAFF Local 792 Quincy Firefighters have worked with Quincy's Director of Public Buildings Paul Hines on the specific design of the rooms.

The creative design solution helps members come back from fires and have the ability to remove and wash both their bunker gear and work uniforms and be able to take a hot shower within the window of an hour.

"The well-being for our firefighters is of extreme importance. This new build will help improve health related issues for the men and efficiency for their process," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

"The members of Local 792 have been at the forefront nationally when it comes to advocating for new and creative ways to protect the health and safety of their brothers, and I am proud of the partnership we have built together."

Added Local 792 in a statement:

"The cancer risks our members face on a daily basis are all too real, and must do everything we can to protect their long-term health. We are thankful for the ongoing collaboration with the City on this and other safety measures important to our members."

The first "shower room" is being installed in North Quincy's Engine 2.

Red Line Station Parking Update From The MBTA

NORTH QUINCY

Since construction began at North Quincy, the North Quincy Hancock Street facility has filled to capacity by roughly 7:30 a.m. each weekday. The North Quincy Newport Avenue facility has been filling to capacity a little later, typically between 7:45 a.m. and 8 a.m. There are a total of 613 spaces available at the North Quincy surface lots during construction (260 spaces at Hancock Street and 353 spaces at Newport Avenue).

Other parking facilities in the area include Braintree (surface lot and garage), Quincy Adams (surface lot and garage) and Wollaston.

WOLLASTON

The MBTA has been encouraging overflow parkers from North Quincy to park at Wollaston. There has been an uptick in parking at Wollaston, which has 403 available spaces, but the facility is still only ~30-40% utilized.

BRAINTREE

Braintree garage has been filling to capacity between 7:15 a.m. and 7:45 a.m., though the Braintree surface lot environment has not.

QUINCY ADAMS

Quincy Adams garage is also highly utilized, though it generally does not fill to capacity.

The MBTA will continue to assess parking capacity at the Red Line South stations during construction of the Red Line projects.

Scenes From Yesterday

Baptist Church then merged with them and the new church became known as the Central Baptist as it is today. The YMCA was built here in 1903-04 and served Quincy's youth for over 50 years until a new YMCA was built on Coddington Street in 1955. The old YMCA site is now home to the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co. From the Postcard Collection of Tom Galvin

Congressional Art Competition Open For High School Students In 8th District

Cong. Stephen F. Lynch announces the opening of "An Artistic Discovery," the 2019 Congressional Art Competition.

The competition is open for submissions from all high school students who reside in the 8th Congressional District including Quincy. All entries must be received by Tuesday, April 30th.

A panel of local art experts will review all submitted artwork, select the top 10 submissions and then vote on the winning submission.

The winner will have his or her work displayed in the United States Capitol for one year. There will also be a reception in Washington, D.C. for all art competition winners and their families to celebrate the opening of the exhibit.

Entries should be sent to Cong. Lynch's Boston, Quincy, or Brockton office and put to the attention of Araba Adjei-Koranteng. For more information on the competition, please contact the office at (617) 428-2000 or visit the website: <https://lynch.house.gov/serving-you/art-competition>.

lynch.house.gov/serving-you/art-competition.

"Many high school students in the 8th Congressional District are passionate about art, and the annual congressional art competition is an exciting opportunity for those students to share their creativity and skill," Lynch said. "Over the last year, visitors to the U.S. Capitol have had the chance to see 'American Dream' by last year's Congressional Art Competition winner, Mya Tomlinson, a student from Norwood High School. Her piece, which includes vivid drawings of important African-American leaders in our nation's history, including Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Malcolm X, Maya Angelou, and President Barack Obama, was created with color pencils and markers to illustrate her patriotism and highlight the importance of civil rights.

"I look forward to seeing this year's original artwork submissions from students across the 8th Congressional District and I encourage everyone interested to apply," the congressman added.

Quincy Revaluation Delay Possible, Assessors Say

New property valuations may not be put into effect for 1967 tax bills, the board of assessors disclosed today.

William J. Callahan, chairman of the Board of Assessors, attributed the possibility of a delay to a likely postponement of distribution of State Aid information and the need for time to review the valuation recommendation of Cole, Layer and Trumble.

In the same statement, Mr. Callahan said a board decision to postpone use of the new values until 1968 may not bring on court action to force 1967 use of the new figures. (Editor's note: The 100% valuations contained in the Cole, Layer and Trumble report were never used. Full, fair (100%) valuation of real and personal property was not implemented until FY1984.)

BELLOTTI CLEARED OF CONFLICT OF INTEREST CHARGES

A three-member special committee appointed by Attorney General Elliot Richardson cleared former Lt. Governor Francis X. Bellotti of conflict of interest charges leveled by Richardson during the November 1966 election campaign.

In a two-page report the committee stated that "By virtue and as a result of such an investigation, the committee is satisfied there is no evidence that Francis X. Bellotti performed any acts which were in violation of the conflict of interest sections of Chapter 268A of the General Laws."

Questions About Cannons Fitting Into Quincy

Ok, I got it. The Boston Cannons will invest over $1 million on Veterans' Stadium improvements, making it a more pleasant experience to watch a game. A digital scoreboard, more comfortable seats, renovated press box, added seats. I got it.

But what about the added traffic? Where are all those cars going to park? At Central Middle School? Side streets? Will there be shuttle buses from Wollaston and Quincy Center stations to decrease game day/evening traffic?

And since the Cannons are a professional team, it means more adults will come, which means alcohol will be served at the stadium, which means more rowdiness and trouble, which means more police presence.

Geez, this is Veterans Stadium in a quiet Quincy neighborhood, not Fenway Park in an urban zone. Quincy residents don't need or want this type of environment when they come home. I have concern for the residents who live across and near the stadium.

And with the Cannons' investment, does this mean they also have a say of who does or doesn't use the field? Are all the Quincy school teams still have immediate, free access there?

There are still many questions about how the Cannons will fit into Quincy and its culture.

South Shore YMCA Taste Of The South Shore March 28

The South Shore YMCA will host the 23rd annual Taste of the South Shore on Thursday, March 28 starting at 6 p.m. at Lombardo's in Randolph.

The signature fundraiser for the South Shore YMCA, the Taste of the South Shore features gourmet tastings from regional restaurants, breweries, and wineries, all coming together to donate their time and raise money for a good cause. This year's event is co-chaired by Hetal Desai and Eric Caron, executive chef at Lombardo's.

"The passion that everyone brings to the table for this event is truly amazing," said Desai. "From the chefs to the volunteers, everyone is motivated to give 110 percent of themselves. Most amazing to me is that each of our restaurants, breweries and wineries are donating all of their time, efforts, and food and beverage to ultimately benefit the South Shore Y. They understand that the YMCA is a charity and know what a staple the Y's facilities, programs and services are for our local communities. I am honored and excited to be a part of this year's Taste of the South Shore."

This year's participating restaurants, wineries and breweries include:

Abby Park, Alma Nove, Barrel House Z, Bia Bistro, Bin Ends, Bradford, Distillery, Caffe Tosca, Castle Island Brewing Co., The Chef's Table, Corner Stop Eatery, Davio's Northern Italian Steakhouse, Fratelli's Pastry Shop, Fruit Center Marketplace, Galley Kitchen & Bar, Greenside Grille, Harpoon Brewery, hint water, Honey Dew Coffee, Jake's Seafood, JP Fuji Group, KEEL Vodka, Konditor Meister, Lavishly Dunn Catering, Leena's Kitchen, Lombardo's, Mayflower Brewing Company, Montilio's Baking Company, Naked Ox Beer Company, Novara, Plymouth Bay, Winery, Restaurant ORO, Rumson's Rum, Scarlet Oak Tavern, Stars on Hingham Harbor, The Tinker's Son, Tosca, Trident Galley & Raw Bar, Untold Brewing, Yocha and more.

Caron added:

"Watching guests stop at each table to learn about each dish or drink is only half the fun for us chefs. We love participating year after year to see the new and exciting tastings the other restaurants, breweries and wineries come up with. There is a sense of competition and pride among the exhibitors as well, as to who will 'wow' the attendees most. Every year, this event keeps getting better and we expect this year to be no different. We're excited, and we're ready to put on another great Taste of the South Shore for over 700 attendees."

For over 20 years now, The Taste of the South Shore has brought together the region's best from the food and beverage scene, this year to support the South Shore YMCA community by strengthening families and children in spirit, mind and body.

"We are beyond appreciative of our chefs who participate year after year because they believe in the South Shore YMCA and its mission," said Michelle Duggan, Senior Development Director, South Shore YMCA. "The YMCA is a charity — ensuring everyone in our community has access to life-changing Y programs and services, regardless of their ability to pay. All proceeds from this event will benefit families and children right here on the South Shore. From our chefs to our guests, everyone can feel good knowing that in addition to a fun night out, they'll be supporting a great cause as well."

Tickets are $125 per person. To purchase tickets and learn more about the event, visit www.ssymca.org/events/taste-of-south-shore. For questions or restaurant and sponsorship inquiries, please contact Michelle Duggan at mduggan@ssymca.org or (781) 264-9416.

Houghs Neck Native Pens New Novel 'Rock Island'

'Rock Island, A Trilogy,' By David Keefe

By ROSEMARY CIPOLLA

The novel, set on the clam flats of Hough's Neck, Rock Island, a Trilogy, is now available on Amazon in paperback and e-book.

The anti-hero, Davey Riley, finds himself defending his clam-digging crew in the face of impending conflict. Riley's journey is a constant struggle between the evil that consumes his being and his self-righteousness. It is a wild tale that follows a path of adventure and suspense.

The author, David J.

Keefe, spent his childhood growing up Hough's Neck: "I loved growing up on the streets of the Neck and Quincy. My life has been shaped by the mentors I encountered from the neighborhood, at the South Shore YMCA, Camp Burgess, and Quincy's wonderful school system." The novel is set in the post-war era of the 1960s, but Keefe believes that the Quincy of today has moved positively beyond those days.

Mary Sullivan, author of Dear Blue Sky, endorses this new novel: "Like Dennis Lehane, Keefe writes about unforgettable characters in the dark underworld of Irish Boston. His Rock Island is full of suspense and hidden twists..."

Keefe had a storied career in the telecommunications industry developing enterprises on four continents. Keefe, who established Quincy Cable-systems in 1981, guided the development of cable television across towns in the South Shore and Cape Cod through the 1980s. In 2003, he co-founded Atlantic Broadband, a top-twenty broadband provider and located Atlantic Broadband's corporate offices in Quincy.

The company was sold in 2012.

Rock Island, a Trilogy, is the first of three novels by Keefe. In addition to his writing projects, Keefe is a founding partner at Broadband Technology Advisors. He lives with his wife, Julie, in Key West.

Fashion Show April 11 Benefits Maria Droste

At Lantana's In Randolph

The Maria Droste Counseling Agency's annual spring fashion show, "Fashion For Compassion," will be held Thursday, April 11th at Lantana's in Randolph.

The annual event benefits the efforts of the Maria Droste Counseling Agency, founded in Quincy in 1992 and located 1354 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

The event committee is currently planning a full-fledge welcome to a very long-awaited spring. As always, this event will prove to be a very fashionable opportunity to socialize with friends and associates. As usual the highlight of the evening will be a sensational spring fashion show.

Several local celebrities and trend setters, both male and female, will take to the runway that evening to showcase an important spring collection from a well-known Quincy boutique, Caryn's Corner. The male side of the fashion story will feature a collection from Hajjar's apparel for men, also of Quincy.

Tickets for the event are available on line at www.mariadrostecounseling.com or by calling Stacey Campbell at the agency (617-471-5686).

Four basic values - acceptance, respect, compassion and healing - are the guiding credo for the staff of counseling professionals at the Maria Droste Services Agency. At this agency a professional staff delivers compassionate and quality services to all in need of mental and holistic health services that nurture both body and spirit.

With this mission in mind, the full-time staff and the many volunteers of licensed professional social workers, have provided critical support to individuals, couples and family groups with clients ranging in age from seven to seventy. A negotiated sliding fee scale, based on financial ability to pay, makes it possible to offer support to all persons in need of help throughout the South Shore.

The ability to offer these programs relies on the work of the committee organizing this special evening, the gracious event sponsors, those offering their services on the runway and in addition those who annually attend that evening. This is the agency's major fund-raising effort and the success of the evening makes the most vital services the agency delivers available to those so in need of their compassionate care.

Check the agency's website for more information about the agency, their services and the event. www.mariadrostecounseling.com

Connected Warriors Comes To Quincy

Free Yoga For Service Members,
Veterans And Their Families

Connected Warriors provides trauma-conscious yoga to service members, veterans and their families worldwide at no charge. Currently, there are classes being held in 24 states, military ships and facilities across the nation and abroad but none in Massachusetts, until now.

Starting Wednesday, March 27th from 6 to 7 p.m., Yoga with Lori will be offering Connected Warrior yoga classes every Wednesday at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St. in the lower level conference room.

Classes will be led by Lori Scott, RYT 200 a certified yoga instructor with the National Yoga Alliance and a Connected Warriors Trauma-Conscious Yoga Teacher. Scott said she is dedicated to creating a relaxing, supportive and inclusive atmosphere for all students to feel empowered. In a safe, non-threatening environment, students are offered choices through movement and breathing to practice self-awareness and methods for reducing the symptoms of chronic stress.

No yoga experience is necessary. This class is for all fitness levels and abilities.

To welcome this wonderful program to Quincy, the public was invited to attend a ribbon cutting ceremony in the lobby of Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St. on March 20th at 1 p.m.

For more information about this program, contact loriscottyoga@gmail.com or visit www.connected-warriors.org

Historian Sara Georgini Speaker At UFPC March 23

The Church of the Presidents and the Abigail Adams Historical Society (AAHS), stewards of the Abigail Adams Birthplace, will present a talk by historian Sara Georgini on her new book, Household Gods: The Religious Lives of the Adams Family on Saturday, March 23, from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Church of the Presidents (United First Parish Church), 1306 Hancock St., Quincy.

Reflecting on his past, President John Adams mused that it was religion that had shaped his family's fortunes and young America's future. The Adamases, globetrotters who extensively chronicled their religious journeys, ultimately developed a cosmopolitan Christianity that blended discovery and criticism, faith and doubt.

Georgini, series editor for the Papers of John Adams at the Massachusetts Historical Society, draws on this rich archive to demonstrate the significance of Christianity—as the different generations understood it—in shaping the family's decisions, great and small. Spanning nearly four centuries of faith from Puritan New England to the Jazz Age, Household Gods tells a new story of American religion, as the Adams family lived it.

Doors will open at 2:30 p.m.; the program begins at 3 p.m.

SARA GEORGINI

Georgini's talk will be followed by a reception, book signing, and tours of the Presidential crypt.

This program is part of a year-long series of special events, #RememberAbigail, planned by partner organizations to commemorate the 200th anniversary of Abigail Adams's death in October 2018 and the 275th anniversary of her birth in November 2019. For more information, see <http://www.rememberabigail.org>

This event is free and open to the public.

The United First Parish Church building, completed in 1828 as the church's fourth meetinghouse, is considered the finest existing Greek Revival church in New England. Designed by noted architect Alexander Parris, it is a National Historic Landmark. Known today as the Church of the Presidents, United First Parish Church is the burial place of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and First Ladies Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams. For more information, visit www.ufpc.org.

The Abigail Adams Historical Society (AAHS) is dedicated to commemorating and educating a worldwide audience about the extraordinary life and times of Abigail Smith Adams, and her legacy of service to country; and to preserving and interpreting her birthplace, the place where her character and ideals were formed, as a resource and inspiration for all. AAHS is the steward for the preservation of Abigail Adams's birthplace and first home, from 1744 to her marriage to John Adams in 1764. The Society offers tours of the house and presents programs on this remarkable American, her family, and the era in which she lived.

Madeline Hutchinson Helps Raise $117,520 For Hospital

Madeline Hutchinson of Quincy, along with 40 teams and over 700 participants, has helped the University of Vermont's annual student-led fundraising event RALLYTHON raise a record-breaking $117,520.29 for the UVM Children's Hospital.

RALLYTHON is a student-led yearlong fundraiser which culminates in a 12-hour dance marathon, signifying the average length of a nurse's shift at Vermont's local Children's Miracle Network Hospital. During RALLYTHON, which took place March 2, students heard stories from patient families treated at the UVM Children's Hospital and engaged with champions - current and past patients of the hospital, while fundraising, participating in games, and dancing until the final reveal their annual fundraising total.

Lifeguard Training Course

The City of Quincy Recreation Department will conduct an American Red Cross Lifeguard Training Course at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool during April school vacation.

The course is open to participants who are at least 15 years of age and capable of passing a pre-requisite water skills test. The pre-requisite swim test will be given to all candidates on Tuesday, April 16, at 10 a.m. at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool.

Class will be held on Tuesday, April 16th through Friday, April 19th from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Lincoln Hancock Community

Hutchinson spent the year as a RALLYTHON participant, gaining leadership, teamwork, and non-profit business experience while raising funds and awareness of Vermont's Children's Miracle Network Hospital, which treats and provides life-saving care to sick and injured kids in need. By the conclusion of this year's dance marathon, Hutchinson raised enough money to earn the distinction of "Miracle Maker" - a title given to participants who have fundraised between $250 - $499 over the course of the year.

Eggless, Milkless, Butterless Chocolate Cake

By MARIE

Today's recipe is one that I have shared a couple of times but worth repeating. You will see that the recipe does not call for eggs, milk or butter and is a great recipe for people who have allergies to dairy.

The recipe is one that my mother used back in the day. This chocolate flavor of this cake is far richer than many of the chocolate-flavored cakes that you can buy.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees - lightly grease a cake pan or cupcake tin. (Remember, if you bake both a cake and cupcakes double this recipe.)

RECIPE

1 and 1/2 cups of flour
1/2 cup cocoa, unsweetened
1 cup of sugar
1/2 teaspoon of salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon white vinegar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cold water

Blend together the flour, cocoa, sugar, salt and baking soda.

Then add the oil, vinegar, vanilla and

Colcannon

By SUSIE

A traditional Irish staple food side dish since the 18th century of mashed potatoes mixed with garden-grown kale or cabbage, had emerged as a staple food hearty and filling that would keep the workingman satiated for a decent stretch of time.

The dish became such an adored part of Irish cuisine that children's songs have been written about it. Here is my version:

3 lbs yellow "floury" or red potatoes, peeled & quartered

1/2 cup nut based cream (I like "NUT-PODS" or "Milkadamia" unsweetened always)

1/4 cup ghee

1 white onion, diced (traditionally leeks are used in this dish, feel free to experiment)

1 large clove garlic, minced

Bay leaf

1/2 head of cabbage, chopped

Sea salt and pepper

cold water. Mix altogether and beat about 2 minutes or until well blended.

Pour into a greased cake pan and bake for 35 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean.

Frost cake when cooled with Sweet Potato Chocolate Frosting.

FROSTING RECIPE:

Ingredients:

1 15 ounce can of pure sweet potato puree
10 ounces of semi-sweet chocolate chips
1/4 cup of cocoa powder

Directions:

Cook the can of sweet potato puree in a saucepan and bring to a simmer over medium heat stirring often so the potato puree does not stick.

Remove from heat and add 10 ounces of semi-sweet chocolate chips and 1/4 cup cocoa powder.

Stir until well blended and cool.

Place in refrigerator to cool before frosting your cake.

Leftover frosting should be stored in the refrigerator.

This recipe will make enough to frost a 9x13 cake.

Avocado oil and Kerry gold butter for sautéing

Bring a large pot of salted water with bay leaf to a boil. Cook potatoes 12-15 minutes or until fork tender. Discard bay leaf.

Cook onion or leeks, and cabbage over medium heat in half avocado oil and half ghee until onion is translucent and cabbage is tender. Add garlic and Season with salt and pepper.

Mash potatoes adding "cream" and 1/4 cup ghee as needed. Season with salt and pepper.

Gently fold together mashed potatoes, cabbage and onions. Top with additional melted butter if desired.

Creating Floral Designs Presentation Thursday At the Wollaston Garden Club

The Wollaston Garden Club's monthly meeting will take place on Thursday, March 21st.

Anna Holmes, a Cape Cod floral designer, will be presenting the best places to source materials, care and handling of materials, and the elements and principals of design. Holmes hosts and co-produces an access cable show: "Floral Designs Made. Easy with Anna." She is also an FTD Master Floral Designer/Owner and works as a Floral Instructor and Lecturer for Museums, Garden Groups, and Floral Shop owners.

Holmes will create five designs for the club: a plant basket, a long and low design with candles, a centerpiece, a collection design from gardens and woodlands, and seasonal hostess gifts.

The Wollaston Garden Club's meeting is open to the community at 12:15 p.m. The meeting is held at the Wollaston Congregational Church Social Hall, 48 Winthrop Ave.

The Wollaston Garden Club is a member of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts.

New Study Reveals MMR Vaccine Does Not Cause Autism

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

By RUTH JONES
MSPH, BSN, RN,
BC, CP-FS

According to a new study of over 650,000 children, the measles, mumps, and rubella vaccine does not increase the risk of autism and does not trigger autism in children who are at risk.

Apprehensions regarding a potential link between the MMR vaccine and autism have persisted for twenty years, since a controversial and ultimately retracted 1998 paper falsely declared there was a direct connection. Still though subsequent studies haven't linked vaccination to autism, fear about the risk has persisted to the point that in several communities across Europe and the U.S., vaccination rates have been too low to prevent measles outbreaks.

Researchers utilized a population registry to evaluate whether the MMR vaccine increased the risk of autism in children born in Denmark between 1999 and 2010. A large cohort of 657,461 children were followed with the researchers documenting diagnoses of autism spectrum disorder as well as known risk factors including age of the parents, diagnosis of autism in a sibling, preterm birth and low weight at birth.

Over 95% of the children received the MMR vaccine, and 6,517 were diagnosed with autism. Findings, published in the journal Annals of Internal Medicine indicated that the MMR vaccine did not increase the risk of autism in children who were not considered at risk for the disorder and did not trigger it in those who were at risk. Additionally, children who received the MMR vaccine were seven percent less likely to develop autism than children who didn't get vaccinated, while children with autistic siblings were more than seven times more likely to be diagnosed with autism than kids without this family history.

Boys were four times more likely to be diagnosed with autism than girls and children who had no childhood vaccinations were 17 percent more likely to be diagnosed with autism than kids who did get recommended vaccinations. Early symptoms of autism can vary but may include repetitive behaviors like hand flapping or body rocking, extreme resistance to change in routine, and sometimes aggression or self-injury.

The notion that vaccines cause autism is still around and is still getting a lot of exposure in social media, with anti-vaccine groups becoming more vocal and even celebrities and politicians spreading fear of vaccines. The biggest contribution of the study was the inclusion of children at risk of autism.

Measles is a highly contagious virus that can be fatal. It begins with a fever that can last a couple of days, followed by a cough, runny nose and pink eye. A rash develops on the face and neck and then disseminates to the rest of the body. In severe cases, pneumonia and encephalitis, an inflammation of the brain, can ensue. People with measles can spread the virus for several days before and after the rash appears. The virus can survive for up to two hours on surfaces where an infected person coughs or sneezes. People can become infected by breathing in droplets or touching a contaminated surface and then touching their eyes, nose or mouth.

A meager five percent reduction in vaccination coverage can triple measles cases in the community, researchers noted.

The myth connecting vaccines and autism grew out of a 1998 study by Andrew Wakefield, published in the medical journal The Lancet. Wakefield had been compensated by a law firm planning to sue manufacturers of the MMR vaccine, and in 2010, he lost his medical license. In 2011, The Lancet retracted the study after an inquiry found that Wakefield altered or misrepresented information on the 12 children who were the foundation for the conclusion of his study. Several subsequent studies attempting to reproduce the results have found no link between vaccines and autism.

Researchers point out that parents should not skip the vaccine out of fear for autism, and that the dangers of not vaccinating include resurgence in measles, evident in the form of outbreaks. At this point, there have been 17 previous studies done in seven countries, three different continents, involving hundreds of thousands of children that show no link. Yet the myth of a connection between vaccines and autism continues to be used by anti-vaccine activists, who have been held responsible for the ongoing measles outbreaks across the United States. At least 206 US cases of measles have been recorded in 2019, after 372 cases in 2018, according to the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Worldwide, measles cases escalated by 48.4% between 2017 and 2018, according to UNICEF calculations from World Health Organization data. Ten countries, including Brazil, the Philippines and France, accounted for almost three-quarters of the total increase in measles cases in 2018. The World Health Organization has regarded vaccine hesitancy, the reluctance or refusal to vaccinate despite the availability of vaccines, as a top 10 threat to global health in 2019. Researchers warn that we are at a tipping point, and that people need to comprehend that a choice not to get a vaccine is not risk-free. It's actually a choice that increases the risk, and unfortunately right now, we are experiencing the consequences of those decisions.

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

Redesigned Quincy College Nursing Program Approved By Board

Quincy College has been granted Initial Approval status by the Massachusetts Board of Registration in Nursing (BORN). Quincy College may now accept applications for enrollment into the Associate in Science Degree in Nursing (ASN) Program and the Certificate of Completion in Practical Nursing (PN) Program.

The ASN and PN programs will be offered on both the Quincy and Plymouth campuses, and the first cohorts of students will begin this fall.

"The Quincy College community is grateful for the support of Mayor Thomas Koch, the City of Quincy, the guidance of the Quincy College Board of Governors, the leadership of the Quincy College faculty and administration, and the efforts of the entire Division of Nursing for their work in developing these new programs at Quincy College," said Quincy College President, Michael Bellotti.

"This collective effort has been led by Dr. Gerald Koocher, ABPP, Provost and Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs, Dr. Roxanne Mihal, DNP, RN, CS-ANP, Dean of Nursing, and the Nursing Faculty who have worked tirelessly to revise, revisit, and redesign every facet of the new Quincy College Nursing program," Bellotti said.

With this new administrative support, vision, and future of nursing, Quincy

College is one of the only higher educational institutions to revitalize a program once censured from the Board of Registration of Nursing.

"The Quincy College nursing program has adapted to meet the evolving and complex workforce needs and expanded our facilities and educational processes to best prepare our students for the healthcare industry in which they will find themselves upon graduation. Our newly approved Associate of Science in Nursing Program and Practical Nursing Certificate programs are built upon a framework that draws heavily on the work of the Massachusetts Nurse of the Future Nursing Core Competencies (NOFNCC)," Bellotti added.

"The Massachusetts Department of Higher Education developed this work to provide a seamless progression through all levels of nursing education," said Dr. Roxanne Mihal, DNP, RN, CS-ANP, Dean of the Academic Division of Nursing at Quincy College.

"The competencies for which our students and faculty will be accountable during their course of study include patient-centered care, professionalism, leadership, informatics and technology, communication, teamwork and collaboration, safety, quality improvement, evidence-based practice, and systems-based practice."

With this approval from the Board of Registration in Nursing (BORN), Quincy College can admit 80 students in the Associate in Science in Nursing (ASN) degree program and 40 students in the Practical Nursing Certificate program for the fall of 2019. The admissions criteria for the Quincy College Nursing program is competitive and selective. Prospective students must complete prerequisite classes with a Grade of C or better, pass the ATI TEAS test, and applicants are formally reviewed by Quincy College Division of Nursing with a formal interview process and a required Informational Session for entrance into the program.

The Quincy College Nursing program is a brand-new program, re-designed, re-focused, and reflective of the changing landscape facing today's professional nurses. The college will now offer an Associate in Science Degree in Nursing and a Certificate of Completion in Practical Nursing. The Quincy College Associate in Science Degree in Nursing is a full-time, 2-year program.

The Associate Degree nurse applies critical thinking skills working with an interdisciplinary team for the development, implementation, evaluation, and modification of nursing care for individuals, families, and communities. This nurse functions in a competent, ethical, and safe manner within the established Standards of Nursing Practice. The associate degree nurse manages resources for care delivery, delegates and supervises licensed and unlicensed assistive personnel. The graduate has a responsibility to be a part of the professional body of nursing. In that regard, the associate degree nurse accepts his/her responsibility to participate in public policy dialogue as it affects the changing contemporary health care systems and advocates for his/her client and the profession as well as promotes health in a complex health care environment.

The Quincy College Certificate of Completion in Practical Nursing is a Full-Time, 10 Month (40 Week) Certificate Program. The

Educate Yourself And Enjoy Quincy Bay

The recent EPA suit against the city of Quincy for violations of the clean water act has been an opportunity for a discouragingly large number of people to repeat poorly informed and tired canards about the water quality in Quincy Bay. Exactly why the suit is happening now rather than years ago is unclear. An explanation may have as much to do with politics as public health.

My point is this: It is simply ignorant not to recognize that the water quality in Quincy Bay is generally quite good.

Last summer boaters from Squantum Yacht Clubs, saw seal and even whale in Quincy Bay many times. The marine growth we find on our boats and mooring equipment also attests to the improvements in the quality of the water. In the past dozen years, the quality of the water in Wollaston Beach swimming areas has been tested on a daily basis during summer at each of four locations and on about 80 different days per summer, totaling roughly 300 Wollaston Beach swimming area samples per summer. These data and useful summaries are publicly available at the MWRA website.

In the last five years, those samples have met the swimming standards about 90% of the time. It is unfortunate that, by design, street storm drains run directly into these swimming areas, but that is a feature that is not likely to change due to cost. Educate yourself and start enjoying one of Quincy's greatest resources: Quincy Bay.

Crime By the Book: Unsolved In The Northeast Topic

Historian Christopher Daley will discuss some of the famous unsolved mysteries in Northeastern America at a program Tuesday, March 26 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

In 1832 a skeleton dressed in armor was unearthed in Fall River Massachusetts. Who was this person? Was he a Viking?.... An early explorer? A Native American? or was the skeleton just an elaborate hoax?

Learn about this mystery and more, including the Bennington Triangle where as many as 10 people have disappeared since 1949, the story of "Leatherman", the NYC judge who fell off the map in August, 1930, and lots more.

Daley has been lecturing all over New England for over 25 years on historical topics of interest. He is currently a history teacher in the Silver Lake Regional School System in Kingston Massachusetts. He holds a B.A. and a M.A. from Bridgewater State University in Political Science and History and has written several articles on varied historical topics for local publications.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library. For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1300, x3.

Boy Scouts Awarded Martin Richard Foundation Grant

The Martin Richard Foundation has named Quincy's Boy Scout Troop 42 among the recipients of its 2019 Martin Richard Foundation Bridge Builder Grants.

The Foundation has awarded the organization with $500, which will support its community service project to beautify Old Sailors' Cemetery.

In total, 31 organizations throughout the state received 2019 Bridge Builder Grants. Recipients were selected for their potential to broaden horizons for young people and encourage them to embrace civic engagement, as well as their reflection of the Martin Richard Foundation's values of choosing kindness, working for inclusion, and celebrating diversity.

The Martin Richard Foundation believes that service to the community builds bridges of understanding and breaks down barriers. Its Bridge Builder campaign encourages young people to stand up and recognize that the time is right to lead an effort in their neighborhoods that brings people together in service.

For more information about the Bridge Builder Program and application guidelines for 2020, visit <http://www.martinrichardfoundation.org/bridge-builder-program>.

Tiffany Narbonne Makes Contribution To Sean Gannon Memorial Fund

Quincy High School graduate and young woman business owner Tiffany Narbonne was honored to make her first contribution from proceeds generated from the sales of her Protect and Serve bracelet design.

"Our Give Back collection has been a staple to my company's collections and in the past we've worked with organizations such as the Humane Society of the United States, National Research Center for Cancer and the Mass General Marathon Team Fighting Kids Cancer," Narbonne said. "Last year after I witnessed our community deal with the tragic event and loss of Sergeant Sean Gannon I knew I had to find a way to Give Back closer to home. I needed to find a way to help out my community."

Narbonne started her company, T. Jazelle six years ago with the core principle of you not only can look good with fashionable jewelry, but it can help make you feel good too. With this principle, she embeds all of her designs with a deeper meaning each wearer can connect to in order for them to find a form of positivity in each and every design.

She considers these meanings to be equally important to the physical design of her jewelry and spends a great deal of time researching, developing and finalizing her meanings.

In November, Narbonne launched her most recent charitable design nationwide, Protect and Serve, to great success. Her goal was to recognize the hard work law enforcement professionals devote and bring attention to the sacrifices they make for their communities. With her community experiencing the tragic events from last year, she knew exactly where she wanted the proceeds generated to go: Sean Gannon Memorial Fund.

With the success of her Protect and Serve charm, and the desire to further help her community through her business, Narbonne is in the final stages of launching her next Give Back design. With a focus on recognizing and supporting United States Veterans, she will be working with another local charity, The Nicholas G. Xiarhos Memorial Fund.

Concert Sunday At The Crane

Winter concerts at the Thomas Crane Public Library continue Sunday, March 24 at 3 p.m. with an acoustic set of African-inspired music performed by the Albino Mbie Trio.

Albino Mbie is an award-winning musician, guitarist, singer, composer, sound and mixing engineer who was born in Maputo, the capital of Mozambique, a country in southern Africa known for its rich musical and cultural heritage. Always resourceful and determined, when he was 16 Mbie built his first guitar from a 5-liter can of oil, scrap wood, and strings made out of electrical cords.

Drawn to the sounds of neighborhood street musicians in Maputo, Mbie always wanted to combine styles and incorporate diverse elements in his music. For his talents to grow, he knew he needed to experience new places, cultures, and sounds. While in University, studying music in Mozambique, he heard about the Berklee School of Music, in Boston. Soon, he was one of the first students to receive a full scholarship through Berklee's African Scholars program and in 2009, he moved across the ocean.

At Berklee, Mbie dove deep into the roots of jazz and expanded his knowledge of music while working with his mentors, Richard Bona and Lionel Loueke, two of the most prominent African musicians in the U.S. today. With their help he began to combine his love of jazz with his own Mozambican traditions.

Today, his music incorporates his musical experiences from Mozambique, the U.S., and many other places around the world, combining rhythmic patterns and musical concepts to create a unique Moz-jazz sound.

Social Security Matters Ask Rusty – Maximizing Social Security Benefits

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I am currently 68 and am waiting to take maximum benefits at age 70. I have been retired for 3 and a half years. My wife turned 62 in February of this year. She stopped working around 1994. What is the best way to maximize our SS benefits? Both of us have longevity on our side. My wife's parents lived into their 80s, her grandmother lived to 96. My mother lived to 84, my father to 98. We are both very active, no big health issues. Signed: Planning Ahead

Dear Planning: You're already on a path to maximize your benefits by waiting until you are 70 to claim. Given that both of you are in good health and assuming you both live a long life, maximizing your wife's benefit will yield you the most in cumulative Social Security benefits.

Assuming you are the higher-earner, your wife's highest benefit will probably be her benefit as your spouse, so maximizing her spousal benefit would be an excellent strategy. Although your wife is eligible to collect her own SS benefit at age 62, if she does so her eventual spousal benefit will be reduced to something less than 50% of your full retirement age (FRA) benefit.

Here's how that works: A spousal benefit, if taken at one's full retirement age (66 ½ for your wife), is 50% of the higher-earning spouse's benefit at his full retirement age (not the increased benefit you get by waiting until age 70). But if the spousal benefit is taken earlier than full retirement age it is reduced actuarially according to the number of months before FRA it is claimed. If your wife claims her own SS benefit at age 62, her eventual spousal benefit will be less than 50% of your benefit, because the spousal boost is added to her early benefit amount. Said another way, any time a Social Security benefit is taken earlier than one's full retirement age it is reduced. In your case, when you claim your benefits at age 70, your wife will be 63 ½. If she is already receiving her own SS benefits she will be automatically deemed to be filing for a spousal benefit at that time, and the amount of her spousal benefit will be reduced due to starting it earlier than her FRA.

However, if she is not yet receiving her own SS benefit, she will not be deemed as filing for her spousal benefit until she files for her own SS on her own work record. The only way your wife can get the full 50% of your FRA benefit amount is by waiting until her full retirement age to claim her benefits. And if you are both in good health and expect to live at least until your mid-80's, your wife waiting until her FRA to apply will give you the most in cumulative lifetime benefits (as well as the highest combined monthly benefits).

But keep in mind that the decision of when to claim benefits must always take into account current financial needs, current health and lifestyle, and anticipated longevity. If you don't need the money right now, and if you're both in good health and expect a long life, then maximizing both of your benefit amounts as described above would be a very sound strategy.

The project had been approved by the Conservation Commission on March 6 and must also go before the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Lang aims to build a five-story building. The top four floors would include the 42 residential units, all condominiums. Each condo would have two bedrooms.

The first floor would include a 37-car garage, which would be accessible off Newcomb Street. In addition to the 37 spaces in the first-floor garage, the developer would include 26 surface spaces in two lots — a larger one on Newcomb Street and a smaller one on Spear Street. The 63 total parking spaces meet the zoning requirement of 1.5 per residential unit in a Business C district.

Robert Harnais, Lang's attorney, said the applicant agreed to make improvements to the crosswalk that spans McGrath Highway near Newcomb Street and Elm Street as part of the project. The improvements will include flashing lights and a protected island in the middle of roadway where pedestrians can stop. The improvements to the crosswalk were added to the plan because residents had voiced concerns about crossing McGrath Highway during prior meetings.

"Knowing the concerns the neighbors had about the crossing — that is a tough road to cross — that's why he did acquiesce and say yes he will put it in there," Harnais said.

Harnais said the applicant made other changes to address concerns members of the Planning Board raised during prior meetings. They include changes to the building's facade at the corner of McGrath Highway and Spear Street and additional landscaping elements — trees and a trellis — along the building.

During the public hearing on project, 11 residents voiced their objections to the project.

Louise O'Brien, a Newcomb Street resident, said

the project would exacerbate traffic in the neighborhood.

"My biggest concern is about all the traffic exiting onto Newcomb Street. Newcomb Street right now is already overcrowded," O'Brien said. "If this project goes forward and we have all those cars exiting with the problem we already had, it's just a disaster waiting to happen."

Spear Street resident Butch Campbell was concerned about parking in the neighborhood. He said there are 11 on-street spaces on the four roads surrounding the proposed building — McGrath Highway, Spear Street, Newcomb Street and Francis Avenue.

"There are 11 spaces on those four streets total that you can park in. I don't care if you go there now or if you go at 10 in the morning or 10 at night, the street is jammed now," Campbell said.

Stephen Holochuck, a Francis Avenue resident, said the proposed building would be too big for the neighborhood. He also said a fully signalized intersection was needed where McGrath Highway, Newcomb Street and Elm Street meet, instead of the improvements the developer would be making, to allow pedestrians to cross safely.

"People don't want to stop and if you're trying to assert your right as a pedestrian, you're kind of playing chicken with them. It's a very big risk to have to take," Holochuck said. "I think this isn't really going to do all that much. I think the only thing that would do something is a real traffic light."

Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy supported the project during the Planning Board meeting. He said McGrath Highway would be able to accommodate the additional traffic the project would bring.

"One of the reasons I support the building is that it's on McGrath Highway... McGrath Highway is a street that can absorb it," he said, noting traffic woes on that road would exist whether or not the project would be built.

McCarthy also said he would work with the city's traffic department to see if more could be done to improve the intersection of McGrath Highway, Newcomb Street and Elm Street, including fully signalizing the intersection.

Chris Iannuzzi, an engineer who peer reviewed the project for the Planning Department, said there were no outstanding issues with the plan.

"We have reviewed design components of this project and we don't find anything that's detrimental to at least conditional approval of this project," he said. "We are in favor of this development as designed."

The board then voted to approve the project after Rob Stevens, the city's deputy planning director, noted the plan had the required number of parking spaces under the zoning code. The applicant did receive a parking waiver from the board, but Stevens said that waiver was sought because some spaces did not have the necessary setback from the property line.

city also plans to extend Cliveden Street across Hancock Street and into a new public parking garage under construction on the Hancock Lot.

"The purpose of the bridge is to facilitate safe access and egress to and from a new development area...where the Ross Garage stood," Tramontozzi said.

"The Generals Bridge over the MBTA Red Line and Commuter Rail will lead to new roadways in the Ross area, eventually extending to Cliveden Street and into the new city-owned parking garage that is currently under construction on the Hancock Lot."

QHS's Sara McDonald Receives Good Citizen Award

High school seniors from four area schools were honored at the recent meeting of the Deborah Sampson Chapter of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution held at the Abington Public Library.

Daniel Lilienfeld from Sharon High School, Sara McDonald from Quincy High School, Michael Mischley from West Bridgewater Middle/Senior High School, and Angelena Piers from Bridgewater Raynham Regional High School were each awarded the NSDAR Good Citizens Award. Daniel Lilienfeld was the Award finalist and will next compete on the state level.

Students selected by their schools for the NSDAR Good Citizens Award must have the qualities of dependability, service, leadership, and patriotism to an outstanding degree and complete an essay on a given topic.

The National Society Daughters of the American Revolution was founded in 1890 to promote historic preservation, education and patriotism. Its members are descended from the patriots who won American independence during the Revolutionary War. With more deputy planning director, said some work on the new bridge would need to take place overnight because the span will run over the MBTA tracks. The public will be notified before that work takes place.

Phase I of the MassDOT project on the new General's Bridge is scheduled to begin the week of March 24th, the mayor's office announced Monday. Four travel lanes for approximately 300 yards, on the west side of Burgin Parkway between Hannon Parkway and Granite Street, will be reduced to two travel lanes, one in each direction for a period of 10 to 12 months. Work will consist of relocating utilities, constructing a retaining wall and raising the grade of the road.

Koch, in his January 2018 State of the City address, said he wanted to name the new span the Generals Bridge in honor of four generals with Quincy ties: Ronald Rand, a retired Air Force brigadier general who is now the president and CEO of the Congressional Medal of Honor Foundation; Gordon Sullivan, a retired Army general who served as the chief of staff of the Army; Army Gen. James McConville, currently the Army's vice chief of staff; and Marine Corps Gen. Joseph Dunford Jr., currently the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

MARGINAL VIEW

When wedge-shaped notches appear in teeth at the "gingival margin" (gumline), the cause is not always tooth decay. Instead, this loss of tooth structure is often attributed to "bruxism" (tooth grinding) or acid reflux that leads to tooth erosion. Called "abfraction," not only does this disappearance of tooth structure pose a threat to the integrity of the tooth, but it is also often unsightly and painful. The first step in treating abfraction is addressing the underlying cause, such as a night guard for bruxism and medication and lifestyle changes for acid reflux. The dentist then can fix the aesthetic and structural aspects of the problem by filling the missing portion of the tooth with a tooth-colored bonding agent. At our dental practice, we never consider our training to be complete. We believe that quality care requires constant, continuing education. From the latest in cosmetic procedures to halting bruxism to complete restorations, our patients trust us with their care, so we feel we owe it to them to share the knowledge we have learned and provide the most up-to-date treatment available. For personalized attention from dedicated specialists, we offer comprehensive dental care for the family at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617 479-8220 for an appointment. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com. P.S. The bonding agent dentists use to repair teeth is a composite material that takes a few minutes to apply, shape, and polish, and lasts for years.

Prekindergarten Program Sets Student Learning

By TOM GORMAN

The Quincy Public Schools prekindergarten program sets the stage for students as they begin their school path.

"The prekindergarten program is a vital part of our districts and helps support early identification and intervention of our youngest learners," Erin Perkins, director of special education of elementary programs, told the school committee on March 6 during an overview of the program. "Our pre-kindergarten serves 812 students which is a pretty big number."

The program is held at three locations - Snug Harbor Elementary School, the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, and new this year, at the Point Webster Middle School.

The Early Childhood Center and Snug Harbor have two-day, half day classes for 3-year-olds on Monday and Thursday or Wednesday and Friday, and four-day, half day classes for 4-year-olds on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

According to Julie Graham, the prekindergarten team administrator, the two-day class at the Early Childhood Center is an integrated program.

"These are integrated classes that have seven students identified with special needs and eight typically developing role model students in the community," she said.

Point Webster has four-day, half day classes for 4-year-olds on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Additionally, the Early Childhood Center and Point Webster also host the CARES program, a separate full day program for three and four-year olds diagnosed with the Autism Spectrum Disorder.

There are 221 pre-K students at the Early Childhood Center - 148 special needs and 73 regular education. Of the 151 total at Snug Harbor there are 73 special needs students and 78 typical developing peers. At Point Webster, there are 15 regular education students and 19 special needs for a total of 34.

Early Childhood Center teacher Laurie Cahill said that all pre-K classes follow the state frameworks and standards with the "goal of nurturing our students to become well-rounded individuals."

Among the strategies are math foundations, literacy, handwriting and "Calm Classroom." The latter enhances coping skills.

Additionally, she explained that theme-based play "really enhances collaboration and leadership skills, opportunities for critical thinking and reasoning, and opportunities to practice empathy and kindness."

Cahill said that prekindergarten isn't all about play and that students learn and practice math and literacy skills daily using developmentally appropriate hands-on activities.

"There's a lot of learning going on," she said.

One example is students counting gold coins and placing them into a leprechaun's hat.

"They're learning to add on and take away using their math talk," said Cahill. "It's incredible what they can do at such an early age."

Cahill also said that handwriting skills are taught by drawing letters in sand, students writing their name, and drawing faces on pumpkins.

"These are all precursors to writing," she said. "Before we put a crayon or pencil in their hand, we are going to embed the correct strokes and correct habits."

Snug Harbor prekindergarten speech therapist Jennifer Leary said social science is also incorporated in the prekindergarten curriculum. Activities include states of matter, such as having students watch ice melt to water.

Expressive language is also taught through use of vocabulary and grammar along with articulation and speech fluency. The latter helps with stuttering which Leary said is normal for 3-year-olds.

Leary explained there is a focus on self-regulation where students are taught self-control. Games include playing slow then fast music where students listen for cues which help them listen for directions. Students are also taught how to take turns during activities.

Teachers employ sensory seating which they say helps control impulses.

"The benefits of self-regulation positively impact all areas of learning," said Leary.

Leary said role play is another activity that helps students. One student will play a baker and another a customer where they learn interaction.

There are programs designed for prekindergarten students with social and emotional disorders as well as for students with communication impairments. The Second Step program is designed to increase school readiness and social skills by promoting skill development in such areas as compassion, empathy, emotion management and problem solving.

The classroom environment focuses on routines and structure while the 'Calm Classroom helps relieve stress and anxiety.

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the district's prekindergarten program blends play and structure which is an important first step in a child's school experience.

"These kids are learning every day and they come ready for kindergarten," he said.

Perkins credits the program's success because of "our talented educators."

"We have a dedicated staff who stay and work with our children every day," she said.

In another matter, the committee approved two overnight field trips: the Quincy High School SkillsUSA to the state SkillsUSA conference in Marlboro April 25 to 27. Also, the committee gave the green light for Sterling Middle School grade 7 trip to Camp Wing in Duxbury May 21 to 23.

Furnace Ave. Residential Building OK'd

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board signed off on a developer's proposal to construct a six-unit residential building on Furnace Avenue.

Darren Maguire is planning to raze the two-family home now located at 12 Furnace Ave. and replace it with a four-story, six-unit building. Each unit would include two bedrooms and 900 square feet of living space.

The plan includes 12 parking spaces, including ones located in a first-floor garage.

The 6,935 square foot parcel at 12 Furnace Ave. is located in a Business B zoning district as well as FEMA-designated floodplain. Edward Fleming, Maguire's attorney, said the home now on site is not floodplain compliant, but the new building would be.

"The existing conditions are completely not floodplain compliant. There is a basement in the existing home where all of the heating systems and utilities exist," Fleming said. "The first floor of that existing house is also in the floodplain - not floodplain compliant."

"This new building will be floodplain compliant."

Quincy's Eric Hall Makes 700th Platelet Donation

Eric Hall of Quincy recently made his 700th platelet donation at the Kraft Family Blood Donor Center in Boston.

Hall reached this considerable milestone after donating platelets once every other week for the past 25 years at the Kraft Center. The donations made by Hall during that time have benefited hundreds of patients and at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Platelets are the blood component that serve as the body's "bandages." They allow blood to clot, helping wounds to heal. Cancer patients, people who have sustained trauma, babies in the neonatal intensive care unit, and many other critically ill patients are at serious risk because their blood does not clot properly. To control their bleeding, these patients require transfusions of healthy platelets which can only be derived from volunteer donors.

Because these life-saving blood products have a shelf life of just five days, being able to count on regular platelet donors like Hall is critically important for both hospitals. All blood products collected at The Kraft Center benefit patients at Dana-Farber and Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Appointments to donate blood or platelets can be made by emailing Blood-Donor@partners.org or by calling the Kraft Center at 617-632-3206.

approval from the Conservation Commission, Fleming said. It will also require approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Fleming said the city is planning to install a new water main under Furnace Avenue and then repave the street. Maguire will coordinate his project with the city.

"That street will be repaved," Fleming said. "All the potholes and problems that exist on that street right now will be remedied and corrected and the street will be much improved."

One resident spoke in favor of the new building during the meeting, and four others wrote letters in support of the project.

James Devine, a Cross Street resident, said the planned building would be an improvement.

"I think it's an improvement to the neighborhood," he said. "The building looks great and you have two parking spots for every unit."

Michael Cronin, who also lives on Cross Street, said he was not opposed to the project but was concerned about the prospect of future development in the neighborhood. He also called the intersection of Furnace Brook Parkway and Copeland Street a "disaster" running on antiquated technology.

Edward Keljik, the owner of a 56-unit apartment building at 33 Furnace Ave., wrote a letter to the board saying he was concerned about the condition of the street.

"This project in question at 12 Furnace Ave. would be a wonderful improvement to Furnace Avenue, but I am unable to support it with the current unsafe conditions of the road," he said. "In order to drive down Furnace Avenue, one must look directly in front of their vehicle to avoid snow heaves and potholes."

Rob Stevens, the city's deputy planning director, said the engineering firm Woodard & Curran had peer reviewed the proposal and was confident the applicant's stormwater management plan would work. Woodard & Curran was asked to peer review the project because the firm is also working with the city to design a new pump station on the neighboring lot at 20 Furnace Ave.

District of Massachusetts, announced the filing of the lawsuit. Lelling and the Environmental Protection Agency allege the city has been allowing sewage and untreated wastewater to discharge into Boston Harbor and adjoining waterways for the past decade.

The mayor said Quincy officials had been meeting with federal regulators to discuss the sewer and drainage concerns and had a tolling agreement to avoid litigation in place for at least 12 months. Quincy officials sought to renew the tolling agreement, but Lelling let it expire March 15, the day the lawsuit was announced, the mayor said.

Koch said the city had spent millions of dollars in the past decade to improve its sewer and drain systems. Because of that, he said he would not enter into a consent decree with the federal government to commit more funds to those issues.

"I don't believe the EPA has recognized the good work we've done. It's not like we haven't been doing anything on these issues," the mayor said. "I am not going to sign something that assigns a penalty to this city because I do not believe we intentionally did anything improper. In fact, quite frankly, the Department of Public Works over the years has gotten awards for the great work that we do in the environment."

"Further...once you sign a consent decree, you put on paper how much the city is going to spend over the next 10 to 15 years without even knowing what our five-year outlook is going to be for revenue going in. I don't want to be in that position of laying teachers off or firemen off because we have to meet a certain quota assigned by the U.S. Attorney's Office."

The EPA, he said, wanted the city to spend "tens and tens of millions of dollars over the next decade," to address the issue.

Koch said he was outraged by the lawsuit because of the effort already made by the city.

"Quite frankly I'm outraged by the action. We've been at the table for months with the U.S. Attorney's Office and folks with the EPA working on issues that affect the waterways around the city. The city has spent tens of millions of dollars over the last decade working to solve some of the challenges we face environmentally," Koch said.

"This city has not ignored this issue. Quite frankly, we've been proactive on this issue right along."

The mayor assured residents the city's beaches are safe to swim in.

"The folks that have lived here a long time have seen, incrementally, the improvement happening. When we were at Wollaston Beach as kids, you couldn't see your ankles looking through the water. Today, the clarity is incredible," Koch said. "The beaches are safe."

Residents, he added, should continue to avoid the beaches the day after rainstorms.

"There was a rule that we always as kids shared and everyone talked about: The day after heavy rain, you stay out of the water. It was just common sense. Storm drains go out into the water and things get into that storm drain system. I would continue to advise people to do that, but the beaches are cleaner than they ever were," Koch said.

"The reality is there has been great improvement and we're continuing down that road, but I believe the lawsuit, and what the EPA wants, is far too aggressive for the city of Quincy and the residents to afford."

The mayor said he was looking into the possibility of countersuing the EPA. That decision, he said, could be made within the week.

Koch was joined at his press conference by U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch and members of the city's legal team. City Solicitor Jim Timmins said one issue his office and federal attorneys could not come to an agreement on was monetary penalties to the city, which the Clean Water Act allows. Timmins said the city wanted to put the money towards environmental projects in lieu of paying fines.

"Instead of just paying the money in terms of a fine, we'd spend the money on related projects," Timmins said. "We felt all along that fining a municipality, particularly in light of the work the mayor has just outlined, was inappropriate. That was a tension point throughout the discussion."

Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, said the concerns raised in the federal lawsuit are not unique to Quincy; sewer and drain systems nationwide can get overwhelmed during storm events, leading to discharges of untreated wastewater. Lynch said the federal government should work with communities to make necessary improvements.

"The systems that were meant to address the weather patterns of 20 or 30 years ago are being overwhelmed here, but that is not because of the negligence of municipal and state officials. That is because of climate change, so we have to recognize there is a federal role here to help municipalities and help the states build resilience into their systems and upgrade their systems so we can face these new superstorms that are impacting these communities," Lynch said.

"I'd like to have a partnership. I don't want the EPA suing the city of Quincy."

The civil complaint filed by Lelling alleges water quality samples from 2009 through 2018 show Quincy discharged pollutants, including the bacteria commonly known as E. coli and Enterococcus, onto Quincy beaches and tidal areas along the coastline. It also alleges that the water quality samples taken from Quincy Bay, Sagamore Creek, Town Brook, Town River Bay and Furnace Brook from the period 2009 through 2013 showed the discharge of ammonia, surfactants and pharmaceutical compounds, which are indicative of sewage waste. In addition, the complaint alleges Quincy's sanitary sewer system overflowed on numerous occasions, resulting in discharges of sewage and untreated wastewater.

"The Clean Water Act is designed to protect the waters of the United States for the health and enjoyment of its citizens," Lelling said in a statement. "This complaint demonstrates our commitment to ensuring that our waters and beaches are protected from discharges such as raw sewage and seeks to require that the city of Quincy take the important and necessary steps to do so."

"This complaint represents a critical step in the ongoing cleanup of Boston Harbor and nearby urban rivers," said Deb Szaro, acting administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency's New England region. "EPA is committed to ensuring the restoration of Boston Harbor and addressing sewage discharges in local communities continues in order to protect public health and clean water."

The Clean Water Act provides for monetary daily penalties of $37,500 for each violation that occurred on or before Nov. 2, 2015, and $54,833 for each violation occurring after Nov. 2, 2015, Lelling said. The complaint seeks the recovery of penalties and requests that the court permanently enjoin Quincy from future violations of the Clean Water Act.

Raw sewage overflows and inadequately controlled stormwater discharges from municipal sewer systems introduce a variety of harmful pollutants, including disease causing organisms, metals and nutrients that threaten our communities' water quality and can contribute to disease outbreaks, beach and shellfish bed closings, flooding, stream scouring, fishing advisories and basement backups of sewage.

Robertson Street Bridge Work Underway

The Robertson Street bridge over Interstate 93 in Quincy has been reduced to one lane of travel as part of the state's $3.8 million project to replace the 61-year-old structure.

The bridge was reduced to one lane of traffic on March 12. The bridge will remain in the one-lane configuration throughout the duration of this project, which is expected to be completed in spring 2021, according to the Massachusetts Department of Transportation.

Future traffic impacts also included nightly temporary lane closures on I-93 and closures of Robertson Street to facilitate bridge demolition operations, and these impacts are currently expected to take place later this spring. More information regarding these impacts will be provided as construction details are finalized.

The existing bridge was constructed in 1958 and is currently safe for travel but is in poor condition. The full scope of work for this project includes removing and replacing the existing bridge structure, installing a bicycle lane, improving sidewalks and wheelchair ramps, and resurfacing the roadway.

MassDOT encourages the public to be mindful of these impacts. Those traveling through the area should reduce speed and use caution. These operations are weather dependent and subject to change without notice.

For more information on traffic conditions travelers are encouraged to:

Dick Dale, King Of Surf Rock, Dies At Age 81

Music Legend Who Grew Up In Quincy Point Was Proud Of His Ties To The City

By SCOTT JACKSON

Dick Dale, who grew up in Quincy Point before moving to California and becoming the King of Surf Rock, died Saturday in Southern California. He was 81.

Mr. Dale was born Richard Anthony Monsour in 1937 in Boston. His family would later move to Shea Street in Quincy Point. Mr. Dale attended Quincy Public Schools before moving to California in 1954, where he took up surfing.

Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, the executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, said Mr. Dale was proud of his ties to Quincy.

"He was very proud of his Quincy roots," Fitzgerald said Monday. "He never forgot where he was from and remembered Quincy and his time in Quincy Public Schools. Quincy and Boston were very important to him."

"He was a very interesting part of Quincy's 20th century history," Fitzgerald added.

He noted Mr. Dale's music was inspired not only by his time in Southern California, but also reflected his Lebanese and Eastern Mediterranean background.

Mr. Dale appeared at a Quincy Historical Society event in May 2005, Fitzgerald said. James Edwards, the president of the historical society, presented Mr. Dale with a commemorative plaque mounted on a Fender Stratocaster, the make of guitar Mr. Dale was famous for playing. Mr. Dale remarked he would display the guitar from the historical society among other awards at his home.

The event had a strong turnout that made an impression on Mr. Dale.

"He was genuinely touched that this many people in Quincy knew him and thought so highly of him," Fitzgerald said. "The afternoon was a memorable occasion for us."

Fitzgerald said Mr. Dale's experience growing up in Quincy was typical for the 1940s and '50s.

"It was a place where he could find himself," Fitzgerald said, noting the late Oscar-winning actress Ruth Gordon had shared the same sentiment.

Mr. Dale was perhaps best known for his version of "Misirlou," a traditional song from the Eastern Mediterranean region. Mr. Dale's recording of the song was released in 1962 and he performed it the following year on the "Ed Sullivan Show." Mr. Dale's version of the song was featured during the opening credits of the 1994 Quentin Tarantino film "Pulp Fiction," the soundtrack of which sold more than three million copies. The film's popularity introduced Mr. Dale and surf rock to a new generation of fans.

rock genre, Mr. Dale inspired numerous musicians that came after him, including Jimi Hendrix, Eddie Van Halen and the Beach Boys.

"I'm sorry to hear about Dick Dale passing," Brian Wilson, the co-founder of the Beach Boys, said Sunday on Twitter. "Dick's guitar playing was a big influence on all of us, and we covered 'Misirlou' on our Surfin' USA album in '63. Love & Mercy to Dick's family."

In 1986, Mr. Dale and Stevie Ray Vaughn recorded a cover of the Chantey's surf song "Pipeline," which was nominated for Best Rock Instrumental Performance at the 1987 Grammy Awards.

Mr. Dale worked with

Leo Fender, the guitar innovator, to design a guitar strong enough to withstand Mr. Dale's style of play. The signature Stratocaster was dubbed "the Beast." The two also collaborated on an amplifier loud enough to fill a dance hall.

Mr. Dale is survived by his wife, Lana Dale, and son Jimmy.

Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) is a valued member of the interprofessional healthcare team, providing competent, evidence-based nursing care in a variety of health care settings. The Licensed Practical Nurse is instrumental in meeting the healthcare needs of older adults and other diverse groups. Within their scope of practice, LPNs utilize the nursing process as the framework for delivering patient-centered nursing care. Standards of Practice and The Code of Ethics for the LPN provide guidelines for professional practice.

"We have built a curriculum, supported faculty, and designed a program truly for the future of Nursing," said Quincy College Provost and Dean of Academic Affairs, Dr. Gerald Koocher.

"The Quincy College Nursing faculty have designed a curriculum that incorporates sound educational and learning theories as well as the standards and best practices of the nursing profession. The curriculum design is both a traditional system-based curriculum blended with a concept based curriculum. Delivery of the curriculum is through an active learning environment that encourages individual student contributions as they learn and achieve. This requires faculty to be actively involved with students in the classroom through mutual respect, responsibility, and collaboration.

"The teaching skills needed to deliver the concept-based curriculum require consideration of the diverse student backgrounds and perspectives that are represented in our student body," Koocher added.

Before students take the National Council Licensure Examination (NCLEX), Quincy College Nursing students will be assessed at every phase for understanding and competency in patient-centered care, professionalism, leadership, informatics and technology, communication, teamwork and collaboration, safety, quality improvement, evidence-based practice, and systems-based practice. Simulations and case scenarios are built into the curriculum designed to help the students develop problem-solving, critical thinking and decision-making skills. Simulations and scenarios will include attempts to include all environmental factors to make the students' learning experience realistic and authentic.

"Quincy College Nursing graduates will enter the 21st century workforce with a solid foundation of the three primary skills sets a nurse must possess: cognitive, psycho motor, and affective skills," said Dr. Diane Gillis, DNP, RN, Assistant Dean for Academic and Clinical Experiences at Quincy College. "Skills they have learned in a purposeful and controlled learning environment at Quincy College. Graduates of our Associate in Science Degree in Nursing program will serve the growing patient population, engaging with them through an expanding network of primary, secondary, tertiary, long-term, and rehab facilities designed to assist the changing and complex needs of patients, in which they will utilize the latest technological advancements, and will themselves serve as educators who promote, maintain, and restore health to their patients," Dr. Gillis added.

Smyth said the first companies that arrived encountered heavy fire in the attached brick building. The fire spread inside void spaces in the walls up the right-hand side of the main structure, reaching all the way to the attic. The roof on the right-hand side of the building then started to collapse, and firefighters had to withdraw from the house.

"At that point, it became a defensive attack," Smyth said.

He said it took firefighters a couple hours to knock down the heavy fire, and then smaller pockets of fire were put out.

The fire displaced seven residents, Smyth said. No firefighters or occupants of the apartments were injured.

Smyth said Sunday's fire caused at least $500,000 in damage. The roof of the building had to be removed late Sunday because of safety concerns, but whether or not the building can be saved had yet to be determined.

The building at 37-41 Copeland St. has an estimated replacement cost of $707,806 and was built in 1920, according to the city assessors' online database.

Smyth said the cause of Sunday's fire had yet to be determined as of early Tuesday afternoon. An occupant told firefighters there was a couch fire and they attempted to extinguish it at first, Smyth said. That could have caused a delay in calling 9-1-1, Smyth said, which could have given the fire time to grow before firefighters arrived.

The five-alarm fire on Newport Avenue in Wollaston on March 12 damaged four buildings and displaced some 20 residents. Four firefighters were injured.

The March 12 conflagration began at 307 Newport Ave., located in the block opposite the Wollaston MBTA station. A passing taxi driver was the first to alert firefighters to the blaze around 9:30 a.m. that morning, Fire Chief Jack Cadegan said.

The building at 307 Newport Ave. had sat vacant since a three-alarm fire in November 2015. Cadegan said investigators believe the fire started in the basement of the building and could have grown for hours before it was noticed.

"It was probably small in origin but had all overnight to get started," he said on March 15.

The exact cause of the five-alarm fire had yet to be determined as of Monday, said Jennifer Mieth, the spokeswoman for the State Fire Marshal's Office.

The first firefighters on scene at Newport Avenue encountered heavy smoke but no fire, Cadegan said, which he called a warning sign for a potential flash over or smoke explosion. The building had been fenced off, and firefighters were delayed in getting into the building because they had to cut into the fence.

"In that short amount of time, enough oxygen got into the building that it became a fireball," Cadegan said.

Firefighters also worked to evacuate nearby buildings on the block, helping 20 to 30 people to safety, Cadegan said. No civilians were injured.

The building at 307 Newport Ave., where the blaze began, collapsed in the fire. It also spread next door to 317 Newport Ave., also known as the Odd Fellows Hall. Jay Duca, the city's director of inspection-al services, said that building would also need to be torn down.

The fire also damaged 307 Newport Ave. — Cadegan and Duca said its fate was still being determined. The building at 299 Newport Ave., on the corner of Brook Street, sustained some damage as well but Duca said it was expected to be OK.

The building at 301 Newport Ave. has a replacement cost of $765,880, according to the assessors' records; 307 Newport Ave. had a replacement cost of $611,761 and 317 Newport Ave. $378,584. All three were built in 1900.

Cadegan said a fifth alarm was called in the stop the conflagration from spreading to the brick apartment building at 323 Newport Ave., which sat just feet away from the Odd Fellows Hall.

"The radiant heat was tremendous, and the wind was blowing in that direction," he said.

The chief noted the radiant heat from a fire can be so hot it ignites flammable materials, such as curtains and bedding, in adjacent buildings without direct contact

DAMAGE DONE by a five-alarm fire March 12 on Newport Avenue in Wollaston was visible the following morning. The fire displaced up to 30 residents and a dozen businesses in the four buildings it damaged. Two buildings are a total loss. The exact cause of the blaze remained undetermined Tuesday when the Quincy Sun went to press, according to the state Fire Marshal.

from the fire itself.

Firefighters entered the apartment building at 323 Newport Ave. to prevent that from happening, Cadegan said, and the building did not sustain any fire damage. Firefighters also ran water lines into the building to shoot into the Odd Fellows Hall.

Every Quincy fire apparatus was on the scene of the fire, joined by companies from Boston, Braintree, Dedham and Randolph. Brookline, Canton, Milton and Weymouth sent companies to provide coverage at Quincy's firehouses.

Cadegan thanked those eight fire departments for their assistance. He also thanked the Quincy Police. Department for their work in closing sections of Newport Avenue and Beale Street to traffic, the Department of Public Works for its assistance in fixing an issue with a hydrant, and Brewster Ambulance for assistance provided on scene and a drone they used the next day to survey the block. The chief noted A-10, a group of volunteers, provided first responders on scene with food — including pizza and sandwiches — cold drinks and coffee; that group, he said, does so for all two-alarm fires in the Boston area.

Four Quincy firefighters were injured during the March 12 fire. Two were taken to the hospital, one for a broken elbow and the other received 17 stitches to his hand.

"Both will hopefully be back in short order," Cadegan said.

Two other firefighters sustained shoulder injuries but remained on scene, the chief said.

The fire displaced about 20 residents, Cadegan said.

5 Things To Know About Invasive Species

Many cities in Massachusetts are at the forefront of combating invasive species, including Quincy.

An invasive species is one that is non-native and likely to do harm, often displacing and destroying plants or animals. They are the largest threat to native wildlife, ecosystems and, according to Jim Doyle, a certified arborist at Hartney Greymont, a Davey company, "a considerable threat to urban forests."

Due to the lack of natural competitors and predators, non-native species often increase in numbers and spread swiftly. Doyle says the best approaches for dealing with invasive species are early detection and rapid response.

"Detecting invaders quickly, and responding rapidly to eliminate them, is essential to limiting the impact and cost when prevention fails," says Doyle. "Plant diverse, native plants and remove invasive plants in your garden."

It is important to learn which invasive species are in your area, and what actions are being done to manage them. Here are some invasives to look out for in your area:

Spotted Lanternfly

The spotted lanternfly is the newest invasive on the scene. While it has not yet been spotted in Massachusetts, this invasive plant hopper travels quickly. First discovered in 2014 in Pennsylvania, the bug has also been detected in Delaware, New York and Virginia. Early detection is vital for the protection of several agricultural industries and your trees. Ongoing infestations can be successfully treated with the right foliar insecticide.

Emerald Ash Borer

By now, you've probably heard of the emerald ash borer, often called EAB. It's an incredibly destructive invasive insect that was first detected in Michigan in 2002. It took 10 years for the pest to make it to Massachusetts, but in 2012, it was found in Dalton. Since then, EAB has been detected in eight Massachusetts counties.

The entire state of Massachusetts is part of the national quarantine zone, limiting the movement of all hardwood, firewood, and green wood products, nursery stock, and any plant materials from any ash species in an effort to stop the spread of this beetle.

Gypsy Moths

The gypsy moth is an invasive forest pest from Europe that is one of the most damaging tree defoliators currently in the U.S. These hairy creatures are nothing new to Massachusetts.

They were first introduced in the 1860s by an amateur entomologist in Medford, and are now well established throughout New England. They hatch from late April to early May in Quincy, and the young caterpillars begin feeding on new tree leaves at the same time.

The city of Quincy has implemented control measures to help combat many invasive infestations. Keep in mind that only city trees are covered by this treatment plan. As a homeowner, you are responsible for protecting your own trees from any invasive species.

5 Things to Know About Invasives

1. Threaten native wildlife and ecosystems by destroying or replacing native food sources.
2. Push many native plants and animals to the brink of extinction.
3. Put 70 million acres of public and private lands at serious risk from 26 different insects and diseases, most of which are non-native invasives—according to the U.S. Forest Service.
4. Cause ecological havoc: Some invasives are capable of changing ecosystems, such as changing soil chemistry or intensifying wildfires.
5. Cost the U.S. billions of dollars in the effort to control or eradicate these invaders and restore habitats such as inedible lands, clogged waterways, and decimated commercial fisheries. Estimates are that the United States spends $138 billion per year in damage and associated control costs in the fight against invasives, according to the U.S. Forest Service.

Unfortunately, Doyle says that invasives are here to stay. "Our challenge is to recognize which invasives need to be managed and the circumstances under which management is likely to be effective."

Consult your local Hartney Greymont tree expert for an invasives check on your property at www.hartney.com/local-offices/need-ham-tree-service.

Planning Board Approves Willard St. Mixed-Use Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board gave the greenlight to a proposed three-story building on the corner of Willard Street and Bates Avenue that will feature ground-level retail with 12 residential units above.

The Fleming brothers' plan for the mixed-use building at 279 Willard St. and 12 Bates Ave. went before the Planning Board on March 13. The project also requires an OK from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The plan calls for 3,800 square feet of retail space on the ground floor. The 12 units would occupy the two floors above. Half would include one bedroom and the other half two bedrooms. Parking for 38 vehicles would be provided in a rear parking lot.

The 26,129 square foot lot upon which the building would be constructed is in a Business B zoning district. It was formerly home to Enterprise Rent-A-Car and two houses; the houses were demolished in recent years.

Rob Fleming said two tenants would likely share the retail space on the ground floor; three would be the most retail tenants that could move in.

Coleman Barry, the Planning Board's vice chairman, asked Fleming what kind of retail tenants would use the space.

"What would this retail be?" Barry said. "I'm always really interested in what sort of businesses you put on the ground in this corridor."

Fleming said the potential retail tenants his family has spoken to would not have high parking demands, even though the project meets the zoning requirements.

Mayor Highlights Repairs To Sewer System

other waterways between 2009 and 2018.

The mayor on Monday said the city is not dumping sewage into the ocean.

"I want to get this perfectly clear out front. The word out there is that we're dumping sewage into Quincy Bay. Nothing could be further from the truth," Koch said. "When I think of dumping of sewage in Quincy Bay, I think of the old MDC operation on Nut Island when they were literally dumping raw sewage into Quincy Bay every day from 23 communities south and west of Quincy."

Instead, Koch said problems arise when a sewer line breaks and allows sewage to enter the city's drain system, which empties into the ocean. The city, he explained, fixes those breaks when they are found.

"There are times when there are breaks in the sewer line, whether it's part of the public line or private line, that nobody really knows about off hand and then it migrates into the storm drain system," the mayor said.

"Once it is caught or there are some counts that are high, we then go look for the source of some of these issues. We're an old city with an old system."

The city had been at the table with the Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Attorney's Office for more than a year to discuss concerns about the sewer system before the suit was filed, the mayor said. Koch said Boston, Fitchburg, Lawrence, Lowell, Revere and Saugus are facing similar issues.

There are 208 miles of sewer collection lines in the city, Koch said, and the average pipe is 96 years old. Of that total, 18 miles are located within 200 feet of the ocean and five miles sit under the ocean at high tide; the mayor said those two categories are the sewer lines the EPA is concerned about.

The city maintains a separate drain system, which includes 150 miles of pipeline; those pipes are on average more than 100 years old. There are 9,329 catch basins in the city and 334 outfalls.

Koch said Quincy spends $3 to $5 million annually on repairs to the sewer collection system, plus more than $1 million annually on sewer operations and maintenance. The city also spends more than $1.2 million annually on maintenance and repairs to the drain system.

The mayor provided councillors with an overview of repairs made to the sewer system in recent years.

In fiscal year 2017, repairs were made to the sewer system in the area of John and Division Streets; Bay-side Beach; the vicinity of Manet Avenue, Bayswater Road and Parkhurst Street; Sea Street from Shoreside Road to Manet Avenue; the area behind Broad Meadows Middle School; in the vicinity of Whitwell Street Park; and Furnace Brook Parkway near Black's Creek.

In FY18, the city made repairs to sewer system near Avalon Beach; in the vicinity of Fayette and Farrington Streets; the neighborhood between Linden Street and Wentworth Street in North Quincy; the area of Waterston and Elm Avenues in Wollaston; and the area from Canton Road to Gordon Road in North Quincy.

In the current fiscal year, FY19, the city is planning repairs near Newcomb Street and McGrath Highway; the Sharon Road, Colby Road and Faxon Road area; the Watkins Street and Morse Street area; and the area near Merrymount Parkway and Armory Street. The city is also working on designs for repairs in the area of Island Avenue and Peterson Road and the area of Clemente Terrace and Elmwood Avenue.

Koch said his administration and prior administrations have made repairs to the sewer system a priority.

"What bothers me a little bit with the EPA is it doesn't sound like the city has been doing anything, [when] it's quite the contrary," he said.

"I don't need the EPA to tell me that we need clean waters in Quincy. I think we all believe that, and I believe we've all been working on that for the last several decades – not just this administration, but prior administrations – with tens of millions of dollars of improvements to our old infrastructure."

He also noted it was Quincy – and not the federal government – that filed the first lawsuit against the state to end the dumping of raw sewage into Quincy Bay from Nut Island. Water quality, Koch said, has improved greatly since then.

"I would suggest the water quality is 100 times better than when we were kids," he said. "We have made great progress during the last several decades on clean water for the people of our city."

"I don't need a federal bureaucrat who doesn't answer to anybody...to tell us to clean our water. We're cleaning our water. It's an important issue for the people in the city. We're a coastal community – 27 miles of coastline. We've got fishermen and lobstermen who

ments for parking.

"We're going to be very conscientious of who we put in there. We'd like to have users that are not going to demand a lot of parking," he said.

Among the potential retail tenants the applicants have spoken to are a number of banks, Fleming added.

"We've spoken to a few banks...they're very interested," he said. "That was the one we've probably had the most conversation about. That type of a user, we think, would be fantastic because it will kind of lighten up the parking use during the evening hours."

Two residents spoke during the public hearing on the proposal. Both were in favor of the project.

James Devine, a Cross Street resident, said he liked the mix of one- and two-bedroom units. The retail space, he added, would be welcome in the area.

"It might be a good fit for that area because I think we need more retail," Devine said. "It seems like it might be a good fit for Willard Street."

Downtown Construction Activities

Proposed work activities for the week of March 17th, 2019

- Traffic impacts for Phase I of the MassDOT project on the new bridge is scheduled to begin the week of March 24th. The State's contractor will set up a permanent work zone on the west side of Burgin Parkway between Hannon Parkway and Granite Street. The four travel lanes will be reduced to two travel lanes, one in each direction for a period of 10 to 12 months. Work will consist of relocating utilities, constructing a retaining wall and raising the grade of the road.
- The crane which will be lifting the precast sections for the new City parking garage will be coming in toward the end of the month. Assembly of the precast sections will take about two to two and a half months to erect.
- Now that the snow has melted, work on the reconfiguration of the Ross parking lot in the area of Parkway and Cliveden Place will be starting this Monday night. Once the roadway reconfiguration of the roadway is complete, MassDOT will be setting up their work zone which will cutoff thru traffic on Parkway from Granite Street to Hannon Parkway. You will

Two Local Players Invited To Basketball Showcase Sunday

Two local high school basketball players have been invited to play in this year's Boston Amateur Basketball Club AAU elite basketball showcase featuring top players from the South Shore on Sunday, March 24 from noon to 3 p.m. at North

Quincy High School. Taking part in the exhibition this year will be Quincy High School senior Brendan Keaveny and North Quincy High School junior Jamone Bing. BABC is operated and coached by Leo Papile, a North Quincy High School graduate. He also worked in the front office for the Boston Celtics for more than 15 years. BABC features players who are future Div. 1 basketball prospects with some reaching the NBA.

depend on the cleanliness of the water as well." The lawsuit has been assigned to a federal magistrate, Koch said. He said the magistrate would likely request the two sides discuss a settlement to avoid a trial. The mayor also raised the possibility of filing a countersuit. He noted the city is still awaiting permits from the EPA for new tide gates at Black's Creek; the City Council approved funding for those tide gates in 2011. City Council President Brad Croall, who requested a briefing on the lawsuit, asked Koch if residents should be concerned about swimming at the beaches with spring starting this week. "One of my constituents had obviously read the media depiction of what was presented from the EPA. They live down in the Quincy Point area - they were talking specifically about Avalon Beach, and believe it or not there will be people swimming laps in there towards the end of April," Croall said. "The question was 'is there anything for me to be concerned about?'" The mayor said there is nothing for residents to be concerned about, though he noted things like bird waste and dog waste can make its way into the drain system after a storm. Councillor Noel DiBona asked if the mayor would need to seek additional funding to fight the federal lawsuit. "Obviously this is going to be a situation where there are attorneys involved," he said. "Is there going to be any legal fees, attorneys' costs, you foresee or anticipate how much that is going to cost for us?" Koch said it was too early to say how much the city would need to pay toward those costs. This year's budget includes $95,000 for outside counsel in the Legal Department's budget. Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy said the work Koch and previous mayors oversaw greatly improved water quality in the ocean around the city. "I know the work that you folks and administrations before you have attempted. You could list many other communities that probably don't do as much due diligence as we do. For a city this size, we keep a good eye on a lot of the activity," McCarthy said. "I know the city has done its homework and is not negligent at all." Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said he was concerned the lawsuit could result in the city prioritizing repairs to sewers near the coast instead of the citywide approach to sewer repairs the administration currently favors. "My fear or my worry would be that we only cater to the list that they have come up with and that becomes our priority rather than the approach...the city has taken to upgrade the problematic areas throughout the entire city, and not just the specified areas that have been identified by the federal agencies," Palmucci said. Koch said he concurred with Palmucci's statement. "I believe it's in the best interest that we have control over the improvements," he said. "I don't want to give that control up to a federal agency." Councillor Anne Mahoney said she was concerned about the possibility of the city filing a countersuit so soon. "It's a big deal when you go from the EPA to the Department of Justice. This is a big step," Mahoney said. "When we talk about countersuing, it makes me a little bit anxious because I would think we would try to work something out, which sounds like our first step of action, not completely jumping to countersuing."

On Friday, March 8, at approximately 1:45 p.m., Detectives Cassidy, Coen, O'Rourke and Glennon of the Drug Control Unit were conducting surveillance in the area of the Home Depot Parking Lot on Willard Street.

During this time, Detective Glennon's attention was drawn to a male standing outside of a parked vehicle. This male looked around, then pulled his hat down tight, covered his head with a hood and put on a pair of gloves. The detective knew based on training and experience that suspects involved in robberies and retail theft often use hats and hoods to conceal their face so as to not be identified by video surveillance and witnesses alike. Gloves are often used to avoid leaving forensic evidence. Add to this that the suspect did not immediately put these items on once outside the vehicle but did so only prior to going into the store. Detective Glennon also knew that Home Depot and other large retail stores are very popular targets for retail theft.

The detective drove closer to determine the license plate of the vehicle in hopes of identifying the suspect, but as the detective checked the front plate, he saw that the number was covered with a piece of thick, black tape. He then drove behind the vehicle and saw that most of the numbers/letters on the rear plate were also covered with tape, but only partially. Detective Glennon ran the license plate and learned that the plate was reported stolen. Based on this information, Detective Glennon notified Detectives Cassidy and O'Rourke, who arrived on scene within seconds. The suspect then entered the store so Detective Glennon followed him while the other detectives observed the vehicle.

As Detective Glennon was about to enter the store, he observed another male approach the car and get into the driver seat. Detective Cassidy then observed the original suspect quickly exit the store and it appeared that he had something concealed under his jacket. Detective Cassidy watched as the suspect then opened the vehicle's front passenger door, removed a box from under his coat and throw it on the floor of the passenger side. The vehicle then left the lot and exited towards Willard Street.

As the vehicle approached the traffic light, they drove around Detective Cassidy, cutting him off, and turned left onto Willard Street. The vehicle then took a right on Rogers Street and then parked. Both males exited the vehicle and upon seeing Detective Cassidy, they got back into the vehicle and drove off at a high speed northbound on Willard Street.

LT. DAN MINTON

Detective Cassidy requested assistance in stopping the vehicle. Detective Glennon pulled in behind the suspect vehicle and activated emergency lights and siren for the vehicle to stop but instead the vehicle increased speed and entered 93 north. The detective requested assistance from the State Police in stopping the suspect vehicle for numerous motor vehicle violations and suspicion of larceny. Detective Glennon followed the vehicle for approximately a half mile with lights and siren activated. The suspect/driver looked back numerous times but failed to stop.

Just south of Exit 11, State Police Sergeant White and Trooper Parsons were able to get the car stopped. The occupants were removed from the vehicle and then Detective Cassidy located and took possession of a Graco Truecoat paint sprayer still in the box with the security system still attached. There was also a roll of black electrical tape that appeared to be identical to the tape used to cover the front plate and affix the rear stolen plate to the plate behind it. Detective Glennon informed the driver of his Miranda warnings which he stated he understood. When asked where he was coming from, the driver said, "Giving my friend a ride from Home Depot." When asked if the car was stolen, he said, "No, it's his," as he motioned in the direction of the passenger/suspect who stole the item. He then said that he drove his friend to Home Depot to get a paint sprayer but they didn't have enough money to buy. A check of the driver's license status showed that he had a suspended license.

Both suspects were then transported to the Quincy Police Station for booking and the vehicle was towed. The stolen license plate was taken as evidence and, once removed, there was another plate which was registered to the suspect. Detective O'Rourke returned to Rogers Street parking lot where the vehicle stopped and found a piece of black electrical tape that appeared to be the tape used to cover the front plate. It appears that Detective Cassidy disturbed the two from uncovering the front plate and that the two had to flee before they were able to remove the stolen rear plate.

Detective Glennon returned to Home Depot and gave them the paint sprayer back. The store employee provided a store receipt showing the value of the Graco Truecoat paint sprayer at $179. The driver, a 34-year-old Stoughton resident, was charged with operating after suspension, shoplifting (joint venture), failure to stop for police, receiving stolen property under $1200, reckless operation of a motor vehicle and attaching plates. The passenger, a 34-year-old Dorchester resident, was charged with shoplifting (joint venture) and receiving stolen property under $1200. Nice work!

YMCA THEFTS: After weeks of reviewing video, following up leads and interviewing witnesses and employees, the Quincy Police Department has now charged 4 individuals (but 3 different incidents) with the thefts of credit cards and car keys at the South Shore YMCA.

The first suspect is considered a professional thief and wanted for extradition in multiple states. He was arrested in Nashua, N.H., for breaking into a locker (with a lock picking kit), stealing credit cards and keys to a member's vehicle. His booking photo matched the photos the Quincy Police obtained of him in the YMCA. It is believed that he is part of a large ring that travels the country committing similar crimes.

During this initial investigation, after hours of watching video, officers determined that there was also another person involved in a separate incident of theft of a wallet. This suspect, from Weymouth, has been charged with the theft. He stole a wallet equipped with Bluetooth from a locker, which gave officers an accurate time of the incident. By reviewing video, inside and outside of the building, the Officers were able to determine who the suspect was.

Then there was a male/female team who entered the YMCA together. While the female watched where the victim went after leaving the locker room to work out, the male accessed his locker and stole his wallet, with cash and a

OBITUARIES

Lola F. Heiler-Stillman, 74

A funeral Mass for Lola F. Heiler-Stillman, age 74, of Jamaica Plain, formerly of Tucson, Arizona, and Milton, was celebrated March 16 in St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Ms. Heiler-Stillman died peacefully March 9 at Massachusetts General Hospital, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Boston to the late Lee A. and Helen V. (Zagami) Heiler, Sr. She was raised in Milton and was a graduate of Fontbonne Academy, Class of 1961, and also the former Boston State College. She later earned an MBA from Northeastern University and an MSW from Arizona State University. She had lived in Jamaica Plain for twenty years, previously in Tucson, Arizona, for ten years, and earlier in Milton.

Ms. Heiler-Stillman was a well-known organist at Saint Joseph's Church in Quincy for over fifteen years where she developed many lasting friendships with clergy, staff, and parishioners. She loved playing for all occasions - Sunday Mass, special liturgies, confirmations, weddings, and funerals.

As a young woman, she began her career in the telecommunications industry for several years with AT&T before her calling to work in social services. As a social worker, Ms. Heiler-Stillman dedicated herself to assisting those in need and especially the homeless. Working in Boston and Tucson, she provided comfort and advice to homeless veterans and Native Americans for many years and often provided pro-bono assistance.

Ms. Heiler-Stillman was an avid reader, a Boston Red Sox fan, and was interested in history, archaeology, and genealogy. She was an active volunteer with the American Red Cross in helping victims of Hurricane Katrina who were housed in Camp Edwards on Cape Cod. She was also an advocate for the Emerald Necklace Conservancy in Boston.

Devoted mother of Leeja Horne of Boston, Jennifer M. Stillman and her husband Leandro Carrera of London, England, and Marianne Peterson and her husband John of Fort Pierce, Florida. Cherished grandmother of Christian and Brittany. Former wife of Nathaniel Stillman and his wife Tracy of Hingham.

Dear sister of Lee A. Heiler, Jr. and his wife Kathleen of Plymouth, Matthew J. Heiler and his wife Janice of Mountain View, CA, and Grace H. Swierk and her partner Brian Costello of Quincy. Also survived by many nieces, nephews, and friends.

Private interment.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations in her memory may be made to Catholic Charities, 275 West Broadway, South Boston, MA 02127 or to the Emerald Necklace Conservancy, 125 The Fenway, Boston, MA 02115.

Patricia C. McNeice, 88

A funeral Mass for Patricia C. (Hughes) McNeice, age 88, of Quincy, was celebrated March 16 in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mrs. McNeice died March 12.

She was lovingly known as "Mimi" to her large family and friends.

The beloved wife of 52 years to the late James McNeice. Loving mother of Pamela Campanale and her husband Michael of Quincy, Debra McNeice-Brown and her husband Henry of Northampton, Janet Campbell and her husband Edward of Abington, James McNeice and his wife Theresa of Norfolk, Michael McNeice and his wife Kathy of Marshfield and the late Patricia McNeice and Andrea Surette. Mother-in-law of Bob Surette of PA. Cherished grandmother to Leah Gibson, Michael J. Campanale, Annemarie Spring, Elizabeth Harnois, Thomas McNeice, Elsa and Patrick Brown, Edward, Ian and Patricia Mary Campbell and

PATRICIA C. MCNEICE

Shawn and Lilli McNeice. She is also survived 9 great grandchildren.

Mrs. McNeice graduated from North Quincy High School, Class of 1948. The foundation of her life was her family, especially her grandchildren; they were everything to her.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, 309 Waverly Oaks Rd., Waltham, MA 02452.

Robert W. Gillooly, 68

Visiting hours for Robert W. "Bob" Gillooly, age 68, of Plymouth and formerly of Quincy were held Sunday in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mr. Gillooly died March 10 at the Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital in Plymouth following a lengthy illness.

Born in Boston, he was a son of the late Francis M. Gillooly and Alice (Connell). A 1969 graduate of North Quincy High School, Mr. Gillooly went on to earn his associate's degree from the New England School of Art. He went on to work for many years as a police officer for the City of Boston, Department of Health and Hospitals on Long Island. He was a member of AFSCME Council 93 in Boston and enjoyed golfing.

Mr. Gillooly was the beloved husband of Elaine M. Gillooly of Plymouth; devoted father of Andrew Gillooly of Worcester, and Erin Gillooly of Plymouth; brother of John Gillooly of Hingham, and the late Francis, Nancy, and William Gillooly. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Interment at Lakeview Cemetery in Weymouth will be at a later date.

Memorial donations may be made in Bob's memory to New England Donor Services, 60 1st Ave, Waltham, MA 02451.

serve wine and malt beverages at certain residences during PorchFest in previous years. Cain said it is up to those individual operators – and not the PorchFest organizers – to seek permission to sell beer and wine during the event this year, as it has been in the past.

In other business March 12, the board:

Approved a special-use permit for the 30th annual Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race on June 29. Registration for the road race starts at 7:30 a.m. that day and the road race is through the streets of Houghs Neck. Proceeds from the event benefit numerous causes in the Houghs Neck and Quincy communities.

Approved a special-use permit for the 38th annual Bike MS Cape Cod Get-away, which will also take place on June 29. The event begins at Blue Cross Blue Shield on Enterprise Drive in North Quincy and travels south through the city on the way to Provincetown. The bicyclists will start their ride at 7:30 a.m. that morning and all should be out of the city by 8:45 a.m. at the latest. Last year's event raised $3.5 million for the Greater New England National MS Society.

Continued for three months a hearing on the number of vehicles allowed on the lot of C & L Auto Body, 45 Copeland St. The continuance will allow owner Michael Campanale time to draft a site plan for the lot delineating parking spaces on the property. Campanale said the city's ordinance for motor II licensees would allow him to house 26 vehicles on the lot, and he plans to abide by that rule.

Shoe Drive At BCU Quincy Branch

Merrimack Valley Credit Union (MVCU) and Bridgewater Credit Union (BCU), a division of Merrimack Valley Credit Union, are hosting shoe drives at their local branches to collect donations for Lazarus House Ministries Inc. in Lawrence and GiftsToGive in Acushnet. The organization will also donate $5 to the non-profits for every pair of gently used shoes collected, up to $10,000.

Shoes donated at MVCU branches in Haverhill, Lawrence, Methuen and North Andover, Mass. and Plaistow and Seabrook, N.H. will be delivered to Lazarus House Ministries. The organization provides physical, emotional and spiritual shelter from life's hardships, offering guests the opportunity to get back on their feet. Lazarus House Ministries helps in many ways, including providing food through its soup kitchen and pantry, housing through its emergency shelter, temporary shelter and transitional housing programs, and work preparation training, giving guests a foundation from which to build on their independence. The organization will make the donated shoes available through its thrift stores, which provide clothing and goods at reduced rates for those who struggle to make ends meet. For those who cannot afford to purchase items, or those transitioning from homelessness, the items are free.

"Merrimack Valley Credit Union's continued support over the last 10 years has allowed us to expand our services and to help open doors out of poverty," said Kelley Granahan, Director of Development, Lazarus House Ministries. "We're proud to have partners like MVCU to help us meet the growing need in our community. The collected shoes and matching donation will help us keep more of our guests warm, fed and on the road to self-sufficiency."

Shoes donated at BCU branches in Bridgewater, Fairhaven, Plymouth and Quincy will benefit GiftsToGive, an organization that relies on the help of thousands of local kids to transform donated clothes, toys and books into thousands of individual gift packages. Hundreds of local agencies and caregivers can request these gift packages for local homeless and at-risk children. Donated kids' shoes will be used for gift packages, while adult shoes will be available in the organization's thrift store, which helps offset its operating costs.

Branches will welcome gently used shoes, including sneakers, sandals, boots and dress shoes for men, women and children, through Tuesday, April 30. MVCU and BCU ask that community members group pairs of shoes together when preparing their donations, so pairs don't get separated. This can be done by tying the two shoe laces together, tying string around the pair, or putting pairs in bags. Donation receipts will be available upon request at all branch locations.

For more information about Merrimack Valley Credit Union and Bridgewater Credit Union, visit <https://www.mvcu.com> or <https://www.bridgewatercu.com>.

credit card. The credit card was used at the Stoughton Target, where video was obtained. The female matched up with the video at the YMCA. Officers thought that it was odd that the suspects would use the card that far away, so they met with Stoughton Police detectives, who immediately identified the well-known (to them) suspects. Both suspects were charged with the thefts. Nice work QPD!

FRAUD PROTECTION AND IDENTITY THEFT FOR MINORS UNDER 16

A new federal law recently went into effect that lets parents and child welfare representatives of people under 16 request a security freeze/credit freeze on their behalf. Taking this step can help protect minors from being a victim. The best part is that it is a free service!

Identity theft happens when someone misuses your personal information, such as a Social Security number, to open accounts, file taxes, or make purchases. Hackers, thieves, and even people you know might steal your identity. Minors typically don't have credit reports, which means that a young person may not find out about issues with their credit reports until they first try to get credit – perhaps even years later.

While a security freeze won't affect anything already on your credit report, it restricts access to your report. That makes it harder for identity thieves to open new accounts using your personal information. With the new law, it's free to freeze and unfreeze your credit file at the three nationwide consumer reporting agencies – Equifax, Experian, and TransUnion. To find contact information for placing a free credit freeze, visit IdentityTheft.gov/credit bureau contacts.

The new law also lets people like parents, guardians, and representatives acting on behalf of a young person in foster care proactively protect a young person's credit file by freezing it.

If the nationwide credit reporting agencies don't have a file on the child, they will create one so they can freeze it. This record can't be used for credit purposes. It's there just to make sure the child's record is frozen and protected against identity theft and fraud.

Depending on the adult's relationship to the child, there are different procedures to put a freeze in place. Parents need to show proof of their authority, like a birth certificate, to freeze or unfreeze the credit file for their child under 16. The new law says that child welfare or probation agency representatives acting on behalf of a young person in foster care can request a security freeze for that child. They have to show documentation certifying that the child is in the agency's care, such as a written communication or an official letter from the child welfare or probation agency or its designee. Child welfare agencies who already work with consumer reporting agencies to pull and review credit reports for youth in their care can use the same company contacts and liaisons to facilitate the security freeze process.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Putting yourself in someone else's shoes isn't easy for you. But if you do it, you'll gain a better perspective of what you need to do to achieve your goals. Be open to new ideas.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) There are still some problems you might have to deal with before moving on to your next project. It's a good idea to accept help from those who share your objectives.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's time to recognize the difference between those who are truly concerned for you and those who simply plan to use your good nature to their advantage. New ideas become increasingly attractive.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Depending on a promise made becoming a promise kept could be more than a mite unwise at this time. It's best to proceed on your own rather than wait for aid that might never arrive.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A recently revitalized relationship might not be quite what the Big Cat expected. But give yourself more time to deal with the changes. A little flexibility can go a long way. Good luck.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A major change could prompt more adjustments. Some of them might be difficult to deal with at first. But hang in there, and before you know it, you'll be coasting to your next goal.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your sense of justice prompts you to speak out against an unfair situation, even if you seem to be the only one who feels that way. But you soon learn that many others agree with you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creating a fuss is not usually your style. But that doesn't mean you should tolerate an ill-mannered attitude. Speak up for yourself, and you'll earn the respect of others.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might have a few loose ends to tie up before you can stamp your project as complete. But once that's done, you might want to celebrate with someone special in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Disappointment darkens the Goat's mood. But close friends rally to pull you through with words of encouragement. Use their confidence in you to rebuild your own self-esteem.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An upcoming decision might be more difficult with inaccurate information. Best to recheck the data you have at hand right now to be sure it won't mislead you later.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An offer you previously turned down might no longer be available. But if you do some checking around, you could find something else that would suit you just fine.

BORN THIS WEEK: You believe in helping those who cannot help themselves. Although it embarrasses you, the fact is, people like you and tell you so.

HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD -- Rami Malek, who won the best actor Oscar for "Bohemian Rhapsody," won an Emmy for "Mr. Robot" in 2016 and played the Dustin Hoffman role to Charlie Hunnam's Steve McQueen in the 2018 remake of "Papillon" (which earned only $4.5 million). At age 37, he has now won an Oscar, Emmy, Golden Globe and a Bafta (the English Oscar), and the heart of Lucy Boynton, who played Freddie Mercury's girlfriend. His next film is "The Voyage of Doctor Doolittle" (a remake of the 1967 Rex Harrison film), with Robert Downey, Jr. in the title role, Antonio Banderas, Michael Sheen and Jim Broadbent, due Jan. 17.

Olivia Coleman, who won her best actress Oscar for "The Favourite," has co-starred in many films, including "The Iron Lady" (2011) and "Murder on the Orient Express" (2017). Her TV roles include "Broadchurch" (2013-2017) and "The Crown." Next up for the 45-year-old Coleman is "Them That Follow," produced and starring Gerard Butler. She's been married to Ed Sinclair since 2001, and they have three children.

Another 45-year-old, Mahershala Ali, won a best supporting Oscar for "Moonlight" last year and now for "Green Book," making him the only supporting actor ever to win consecutively. He joins two-time supporting winners: Walter Brennan (1938/1940), Anthony Quinn (1952/1956), Peter Ustinov (1960/1964) and Christoph Waltz (2009/2012).

Ali currently stars in HBO's "True Detective," as well as the Oscar-winning best animated film "Spider-Man Into the Spider-Verse" and "Alita: Battle Angel," with Oscar-winners Christoph Waltz and Jennifer Connelly. Ali wed actress Sami-Karim in 2013, and they had a daughter in 2017.

There have been four back-to-back Oscar winners for best actor: Luise Rainer for "The Great Ziegfeld" (1936) and "The Good Earth" (1937); Spencer Tracy for "Captains Courageous" (1937) and "Boys Town" (1938); Katharine Hepburn (who won four total) for "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" (1967) and "The Lion in Winter" (1968); and Tom Hanks in "Philadelphia" (1993) and "Forrest Gump" (1994).

Regina King, best supporting actress Oscar winner for "If Beale Street Could Talk," played the daughter of Marla Gibbs and Hal Williams in the TV series "227" (1985-90). She gained respect for films such as "Boyz in the Hood" (1991), "Jerry Maguire" (1996) and "Ray" (2004), to name just a few. King killed it in "American Crime Story" (2015-2017) and directed 11 TV shows, including "Scandal," "Shameless" and "The Good Doctor." Up next is HBO's series "Watchmen," with Louis Gossett, Jr. and Jeremy Irons.

Some say Oscar got his name from Margaret Herrick, for whom the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences library is named, who joked that the statue resembled her Uncle Oscar. But it's more likely that Bette Davis, a huge outspoken trend-setter, gave the name worldwide exposure. She thought the statue's "bum" reminded her of her first husband, Harmon Oscar Nelson.

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Carved Sewing Machine

It's important to keep up with what is changing in the world of art and collecting. Fool-the-eye (trompe-l'oeil) is a popular theme in a new type of art. Today, copies of machines, pieces of buildings, a huge hanging light bulb or an enlarged comic strip or stamp pad are displayed as outdoor statues or large indoor sculptures.

Recently, a wood carving by Japanese artist Fumio Yoshimura (1926-2002) was offered by Auction Team Breker, a German gallery, in an online auction that reached the United States and most other large countries. It looks like a small Singer treadle sewing machine made in the early 1900s. The carved machine has a Singer plaque, bobbins, fretwork, treadle, drive-belt and wheel on a base with drawer fronts, all made of linden wood. It is made as a sculpture to place in a prominent spot in the house. The artist has made other utilitarian items like typewriters, motorbikes and various mechanical objects that were created full-size. He never depicted people. It's a new type of art; however, the sewing machine didn't sell.

Q: How can I obtain an appraiser and sell an aviation relic? I have a framed piece of original fabric from the Fokker D-VII "U.10." The print states it's the second in a series of relics from the National Air and Space Museum.

A: You have a limited-edition print that is part of the National Air and Space Museum's Aviation Relic Series. Each print contains a 2-inch square of fabric from a historical aircraft in the museum's collection. The fabric was removed and replaced when the airplanes were being restored in the 1970s and early 1980s. The Fokker D-VII was a German plane flown during World War I. The pilot, Heinz von Beaulieu-Marconnay, landed the plane on an American airstrip in France on Nov. 9, 1918, two days before the armistice was signed. Von Beaulieu-Marconnay was in the cavalry before he became a pilot. The 3-foot-high "U-10" painted on the side of the plane stands for "Tenth Uhlans," his former cavalry unit. The museum gift shop might be able to tell you when this print was issued and what its original cost. Another print from this series sold at auction recently for $270.

CURRENT PRICES

Bottle opener, sailboat, cast iron, 7 1/2 x 3 1/4 inches, $15.

Marshmallow tin, "Strawberry Oberon Marshmallows, Loose Wiles Co.," round with red and gold lithograph, 1930s, 4-inch diameter, $90.

Trunk, Louis Vuitton, monogram, garment bag, rolling, 54 x 22 1/4 inches, $365.

Silver plate, centerpiece, applied flowers, leaves, pierced handles, glass liner, 8 x 22 3/4 inches, $570.

TIP: If you buy an old piece of furniture, smell it. If it smells musty, there must be mold spores somewhere, perhaps on the bottom of the seat. Wipe the furniture with denatured alcohol. Finished wooden surfaces can be cleaned with furniture cleaner.

STICKELERS

A certain box of candy can be equally divided (without cutting pieces) between 3, 4 or 13 people.

What is the least number of pieces of candy the box could contain?

©2019 King Features Syndicate

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was Isaac Asimov, professor of biochemistry and beloved Grand Master of science fiction, who made the following sage observation: "There is a cult of ignorance in the United States, and there always has been. The strain of anti-intellectualism has been a constant thread winding its way through our political and cultural life, nurtured by the false notion that democracy means that 'my ignorance is just as good as your knowledge.'"

* According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, if you're like the average American, you drink 22.7 gallons of coffee every year. The surprising thing about that statistic isn't how much it is, though -- it's how little. It seems that in the 1940s, Americans were drinking twice that amount of java.

* You might be surprised to learn that gravity makes you shorter. It's true; gravity compresses your spine -- in a weightless environment, you would be 2 to 3 inches taller than you are here on Earth.

* George W. Church, the founder of Church's Fried Chicken, didn't actually enter the restaurant business until after he retired. In his first career, Church ran a chicken hatchery and sold incubators.

* Those who study such things say that 1 percent of the world's lizard species have no males. The females reproduce by parthenogenesis, which produces offspring that are clones of their mothers.

* Before Charlton Heston became a famous actor, he earned cash by serving as an artists' model -- and posed in the nude.

Thought for the Day: "Mistakes are a part of being human. Appreciate your mistakes for what they are: precious life lessons that can only be learned the hard way. Unless it's a fatal mistake, which, at least, others can learn from." -- Al Franken

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* Worried about pesticides in your diet? Try mangos, one of the fruits least likely to have pesticide residue.

* It can be a snap to remove burned-on food from the bottom of a pot or frying pan. All you have to do is sprinkle in some baking soda and add hot water.

Let the mixture sit overnight. In the morning, add a dash more baking soda and scrub the residue away.

* Got dirty floors? Make sure you aren't throwing good effort into a dirty mop. You'll need a second bucket filled with rinse water, then follow this pattern: Clean mop in water with cleaner, mop a section of floor, rinse mop in plain water, go back over that section, rinse mop again. Repeat.

* "I like strong tea with no milk. My husband drinks black coffee. The coffee-maker and our mugs get stained over time. About monthly, I 'brew' a pot of hot water, but I put a dishwasher 'pac' in the carafe.

The hot water dissolves the cleaner, making the coffee carafe easy to clean. Then I use the detergent water to clean all the mugs. It works like magic." -- T.L. in Missouri

* Just in time for tax season: Don't overlook the value of opening and contributing to an individual retirement account to lower your tax bill. Contributions need not always be made by Dec. 31 to count; it's possible to open an account as late as tax-filing day on April 15 and still have it count against your 2018 taxes.

Two Multi-Alarm Fires In One Week

Brewster Ambulance, the Red Cross and Ally Sleiman, the city's emergency management director, were able to provide food to those residents and a hotel to stay in overnight.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the city would work to assist those displaced by the fire.

"We certainly feel for those people who were impacted. Thankfully there was no loss of life; there was no major injury. I thought our firefighters did an extraordinary job with that apartment building right next door - there were people in it, they got them evacuated and saved that building," Koch said.

"Through emergency management, the Red Cross and others, we're working with those people that had been affected by losing their apartments and their homes. We're on that. We're working with the housing authority as well to try find places for these people to live."

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain, whose district includes Newport Avenue and the adjoining neighborhood, credited the city's fire and police departments for their efforts.

"I did want to thank Chief Cadegan and the Quincy Police Department...for being so diligent in their response to the fire that took place Tuesday on Newport Ave. across from the Wollaston T station," Cain said the afternoon of March 12.

"As far as I've learned, there has been minimal human damage - some sort of minor injuries - but all said it's a pretty devastating fire and we hope for the best for the occupants of the buildings affected."

Cadegan said he could recall only two other five-alarm fires since 1985, the year he joined the department.

"In 33 years, I think I've only been to two others I remember," he said, noting "the volume of fire we had on arrival dictated we had no other course," than to call in a fifth alarm.

"I couldn't be any more proud of the work the firefighters did," Cadegan added.

This was the third fire he could recall in that block of Newport Avenue.

"That area, I have been there for three fires," the chief said. "For whatever reason, it's had a tough history with fires."

Smyth, the deputy fire chief, said having to battle two multi-alarm fires in less than one week is part of the unpredictable nature of being a firefighter.

ing a firefighter.

"With the fire service comes unpredictability. I always say, when we're on duty we don't know where we're going to be in four minutes," Smyth said.

QUINCY FIREFIGHTERS pour water into one of the buildings involved in a five-alarm fire March 12 on Newport Avenue in Wollaston.

"Quincy is lucky to have such a well-trained fire department. On both of these fires, the firefighters responded well."

In addition to the Newport Avenue and Copeland Street fires, the Quincy Fire Department sent a ladder and an engine to provide coverage in Boston Friday night while Boston firefighters worked to extinguish a nine-alarm fire at the New England Casket Company building in East Boston.

U-Haul Offers 30 Days Free Self-Storage To Victims Of Quincy Apartment Fire

U-Haul Company of Southern Massachusetts and Cape Cod is offering 30 days of free self-storage and U-Box container usage to residents who have been displaced or affected by the Quincy apartment fire.

The three-alarm fire broke out at 41 Copeland St. around 5:30 a.m. Sunday.

"We want to extend our thoughts and prayers to the victims and their families," stated Tom Hamilton, general manager of U-Haul Moving & Storage of Weymouth. "Everyone made it out safely, but homes have been affected. We want to support our community by offering a secure place for their belongings to be stored."

Families seeking additional information or needing to arrange 30 days free self-storage should contact the nearest participating facility:

U-Haul Moving & Storage of Abington, 403 Bedford St. Abington, (339) 469-2970.

U-Haul Moving & Storage of Stoughton, 224 Washington St., Stoughton, (781) 341-6861.

U-Haul Moving & Storage of Weymouth, 666 Bridge St., Weymouth, (781) 331-4050.

"With U-Box containers, you can conveniently pick up our custom-designed trailer and take your U-Box with you. U-Haul also can store your U-Box container in our secure warehouses or pick up and deliver it to a location of your choice," Hamilton said.
